25,000 SEE FOOTBALL GAME

STADIUM, Cambridge, Oct 23.—With a band playing Brown airs, and two lusty cheering sections vieing with each other to cheer on their team to victory, Harvard met Brown to-day in the hardest gridiron battle this season.

Over 25,000 people were on hand to witness the game. The car service was badly taxed to accommodate the crowds which almost choked up the passage on the old bridge, and for over two hours kept arriving at the field.

The Providence lads were accompanied by a loyal band of rooters, 2,000 strong, and a brass band of twenty pieces that made noise enough for twice that number. The visiting team was in the best possible condition and they had up their sleeve some new formations with which they hoped to sweep the Crimson off their feet.

The Harvard team was in good condition, too, except McKay and P. Smith, who were under suspicion. For small duties the Crimson had all the better of the Brown men, who were rather poorly supplied with these necessary adjuncts.

The crowd was the largest of the year. The great weather drew out the fair sex in large numbers and the seats were gay with color. The game was a kind of an appetizer for the good things that are to come in the football line.

Cheering began long before the teams trotted on the field and the rival undergraduates made the air ring with the yells that were hauled back and forth. The Brown men were up here to break the hoodoo that has followed the team to Cambridge for several years. Time and again have they swooped down on the Similum with a fine team and then with victory within their grasp they have lost through a fluke or a fortunate play by Harvard.

More than 25,000 people were on hand when the game started. The car service was heavily taxed to accommodate the crowds which almost choked up the passage on the old bridge and for over two hours kept arriving at the field.

The visitors' stands were a sea of Brown colors, while the immediate vicinity of the Crimson banners waved defiance.

"We are putting the game in perfect condition, and it will be a close run for Harvard. I feel sure that if we do as well as we have we will undoubtedly win," said Coach Gammons of Brown just before the game.

"Harvard will do her best, considering the crippled condition," said Coach Haughton of Harvard.

Tremendous cheers followed the advent of the Brown and Harvard teams in the field.

The Harvard stands cheered as never before, for the some of Harvard realized that it was to be a close call. The Brown band played some stirring airs on the field for a short practice before the whistle blew.

FIRST HALF.

The whistle blew at 2:58. Brown won the toss, and chose the south goal. P. Fothingham kicked off to Sprackling who took the ball into Brown's 20 yard line. High went through centre to Brown's 35-yard line. McKay pouted to Frothingham who was nailed outside Harvard's 40-yard line by Raquet. On a fake punt O'Flaherty went around left end to Harvard's 45-yard line. Long went through right guard to Harvard's 42-yard line. With third down and two yards to gain Minot punted to Sprackling who ran in five yards to Brown's 48-yard line.

McKay made a straight arm work meal through right tackle to Brown's 40-yard line. High went through centre to Brown's 33-yard line, and on the next play went through again to Brown's 53-yard line. McKay went through to Brown's 35-yard line. On a fake punt High went through centre to Brown's 20-yard line. Minot punted to Sprackling who ran in five yards to gain High went around right end to Harvard's 52 yard line, not making his distance. The ball went to Harvard on downs.

L. D. Smith replaced G. Browne, who was injured. Long went to right guard for Harvard's 53-yard line. Frothingham went through right tackle for 3 yards.

Minot punted to Sprackling, who was nailed at Brown's 25-yard line. McKay, on an attempted end run was thrown back to Brown's 23-yard line. McKay went through left tackle to Brown's 43-yard line. Frothingham failed to gain at left tackle. Minot punted, Mills to McKay, who made a fine plunge through to Brown's 33-yard line. Reguier went to Brown's 37-yard line on a delayed pass from High.

Brown's Ball on Fumble.

McKay of Brown was injured, but stayed in. High backed centre to Brown's 40-yard line. McKay of Brown punted to Frothingham, who fumbled, and Long also fumbled in attempting to recover. Reguier of Brown finally recovered the ball on Harvard's 34-yard line.

Long injured his head in this play and Morrison replaced him at right half. Reguier was hurt but stayed in. Young went through left tackle to Harvard's 30-yard line. High backed center to Harvard's 27-yard line. High made first down through left guard to Harvard's 24-yard line. McKay of Brown went on right tackle for Harvard's 22-yard line. Young made two yards on a left and run to Harvard's 20-yard line. With third down and six yards to gain a forward pass, Sprackling to Reguier, who shifted ends, worked successfully and Reguier ran it to Harvard's 10-yard line. In two successive downs High could only go to Harvard's 5-yard line through right tackle and centre, where Harvard held the visitors.

Frothingham Steals Ball.

Frothingham stole the ball and went the length of the field on an attempted touchdown. This was not allowed. On the third down and five yards to gain Young was thrown back for a loss to Harvard's seven-yard line. On an attempted run Brown had the ball on downs.

Harrison went through right guard to Harvard's eighteen-yard line on a fake punt. On another fake punt Morrison went to Harvard's twenty-one-yard line. Minot punted to Sprackling, who was nailed by L. Withington at Brown's fifty-yard line. On unquestionable defence such as Harvard has never seen before this season held the Crimson high in an attempted plunge to centre. McKay punted out of bounds to Frothingham at Harvard's twenty-yard line.

Frothingham ripped the right tackle to Harvard's 25-yard line. Minot punted, but Sprackling missed the catch and Houston fastened to the ball for Harvard at Brown's 45-yard line. Minot went to Brown's 15-yard line. By fine interference Minot was pushed through centre to Brown's 37-yard line. On the next play Minot made first down, and went through centre to Brown's 33-yard line.

On the next play Harvard shook off the Brown defence and Minot rolled around the left tackle to Brown's 12-yard line Minot tore through centre to the 6-yard line. The Brown stands cheered "Hold them," and the visitors did for the next play went only to the 4-yard line, when Harvard left the ball on downs. McKay punted high out of danger to Frothingham outside at Brown's 25-yard line.

Harvard Scores.

Almost only gained two yards through centre to Brown's twenty-yard line and on the next play tore through Brown's centre, after the Brown players had massed on him, to Brown's seventeen-yard line. He did this again on the next play and carried the ball along with him to Brown's twelve-yard line. Frothingham sustained left tackle to Brown's eight-yard line. Brown was penalized five yards for Brown's four-yard line for offside play. Minot plunged between Reguier and Corp for the first touchdown. P. Withington kicked the goal. Score—Harvard, 6; Brown, 0.

ONLY HALF MILLION IN YERKES ESTATE

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Lawyers identified with the litigation over the estate of the late Charles T. Yerkes, the traction magnate, said to-day that the city of New York cannot and will not try to carry out that portion of the will that stipulates that $700,000 be set aside for a memorial hospital and library. The reason for this, it was stated, is that the will does not state that the city of New York shall do these things, although this was what Mr. Yerkes wanted. Officials of the Central Trust Company, which was delegated to carry out the provisions of the will, said to-day that there would not be $500,000 left after all claims against the estate had been paid.

TRUNKMAKER WINSHIP DIES

Henry A. Winship, the veteran trunkmaker, died early to-day at his home, No. 43 West Cedar street, of senile debility. He was ninety years old. He was in business at No. 16 Tremont street. He had been engaged in trunkmaking since 1842.

He was active in business up to the time of his death. He is survived by a brother, W. W. Winship, and a sister, Mrs. C. H. Sprague, both of Malden. Mrs. Winship died about three years ago.

PRIZE BIGAMIST, 68, IS ARRESTED

YONKERS, N. Y., Oct. 23.—John J. Tremper, who, according to his own story, is one of the champion bigamists of the country, having five wives, was arrested here to-day. Tremper, who lives in Newburgh, N. Y., was arrested as a suspicious person. According to the police, Tremper confessed that he was on his way to wed his sixth wife, Miss Mary E. Mahn of Vinutown, Ct. His first marriage was in Newburg in 1874, the bride being Miss Elizabeth A. Wilson. The others were: Mrs. Lyman, Utica, N. Y., 1898; Susie A. Myers, West Minster, Pa., 1900; Louisa Chiberi, Wilkesberre, Pa., 1903; Carrie Allen, Norwood, N. J., 1908. He is sixty-eight years old.

BOY BLOCKS ATTEMPT TO KIDNAP GIRL

What the Cambridge police say was a bold attempt to kidnap little seven-year-old Anna McGillvary of No. 127 Auburn street was frustrated by her brother Colin, aged nine.

Last night Colin and his sister Anna were returning from a visit to a friend's house. They had nearly reached their home, when at the corner of Green and Pearl streets a man approached the boy and said: "Here is a cent, go over to Kennedy's factory and tell a man with a gray mustache that I want to see him."

The boy started and had gone but a few yards when he heard his sister scream. Turning around he saw a man hurrying around the corner, holding his sister with one hand and trying to stifle her cries with the other.

Running to where his sister was struggling with her assailant, Colin cried for help, at the same time kicking and pulling at the man.

The stranger man released his hold on the girl and made his escape as neighbors came from their homes. Allen McGillvary, father of the children, notified the police of Station 2 to-day. The man is described as well dressed. He wore a black coat, dark green trousers and a green soft hat.

YALE FIELD, New Haven, Oct. 23.—For the first time in the history of the two universities Yale and Colgate clashed to-day on the gridiron. A low score by Yale seemed probable because of the fact that several of her stars were kept out of the game by Trainer Mack and because of the fine showing made by the visitors in their previous games this season.

Colgate's achievement last Saturday in rolling up 58 points against St. Lawrence University seemed to settle her strength and her fine record of last year, playing a 6 to 0 losing game at West Point, and of beating Syracuse by that same score indicated that the eleven is worthy of prompt recognition by the big universities in its football talent. The fast ballbacks of Colgate were expected to make trouble for the Yale line for the first time this season.

For Yale End-run Kilpatrick went to Boston to see the Harvard-Brown game, the veteran Hobbs was kept on the side lines by a bad shoulder, and it was doubtful till just before the game whether Andrus would be allowed to start the game because of his back, which was slightly strained at West Point last Saturday.

Captain Foy did not plan to start the game although it was likely that he would get into the play in the second half to demonstrate a few property executed forward passes and onside kicks. It was planned to start Fred Murphy, the baseball captain of last Spring, at fullback and to give Pete Francis, who has been tried at centre, tackle and fullback, a chance in a new position, fullback.

Ideal football weather, crisp and clear, brought out a large crowd.

$500,000 WILL CLAIMANT HAS FLED IN AUTO

Shadowed by detectives unmeeting from ten to twenty-five, Daniel Blake Russell, claiming to one half of the $500,000 estate of Daniel Russell of Melrose, and his lawyer, Senator Leslie Simpson of North Dakota, are now secreted in a little town just outside of New York State, near Malone.

Mrs. Russell, who accompanied her husband to Malone, N. Y., where she will remain until the hearing is resumed at East Cambridge, November 1.

Their sudden departure from Malone was the result of being shadowed about the hotel. Unknown to the detectives, Mr. Simpson hired an automobile and both secretly left at 2 a. m. to-day.

With the news of Mr. Russell's sudden departure from Malone, it became known to-day that Ferdinand C. Almy, one of the executors of the Russell estate, had suddenly left on the noon train for Albany. Why he went is a mystery, but it is thought that he will go to Malone.

Hounded by Detectives.

N. J. Sheldon, the other attorney for Daniel Blake Russell, is handling the Boston end of the case from his office in Boston. Mr. Sheldon received a letter from Mr. Simpson this morning, saying that he had been hounded by detectives, and that he had to take its early morning ride to escape them.

"Ever since Mr. Simpson left Boston he has been followed by detectives," said Mr. Sheldon to-day. "He has eluded them long out they will find him again before long. There is no law which prevents shadowing. The only course left is for the hotel authorities to act.

"Mr. Simpson went to New York for the purpose of seeing Mrs. Michael Kennedy, whose maiden name was Jessie Carleton, and whose first husband was James Herbert Russell, alleged by William C. Russell to be the claimant in the present case.

"I have it on good authority that Mrs. Kennedy was shown pictures of this claimant a few days ago, and she said that they were not the pictures of her first husband. That was the reason why Mr. Simpson went to Malone.

"I do not know whether he will go to North Dakota before returning to Boston or not. At any rate he will have some witnesses from that place. There will be about thirty in all to testify when the case is resumed."

Mr. and Mrs. Russell and Senator Simpson arrived at the Malone hotel early Monday. The Senator was assigned to room 19. The claimant registered as Daniel Russell and wife and was assigned to room 18. Before the Senator and the Russells were fairly settled in their rooms several detectives had registered and two of them got rooms on the floor with Mrs. Simpson and Dan Russell. Later by a shift of rooms it was arranged so that there were strange men in every such side of room 18.

Then began a surveillance that kept Daniel Russell and his wife inside their room until Russell's sudden disappearance. Russell and his wife complained to the landlord that they were being followed by detectives and that they were unable to open their door or speak above a whisper for fear of being seen or heard. Russell ordered in his room until Wednesday night when he moved into another room by way of the corridor, evading the detectives. Finally Russell could stand the surveillance no longer and with Senator Simpson fled.

SPAIN ON VERGE OF BREAK WITH VATICAN ON THE FERRER CASE

MADRID, Oct. 22.—Spain to-day is on the verge of an open rupture with the Vatican. The new cabinet cabinet headed by Senor Moret has already taken an anti-clerical stand and the Minister of Foreign Affairs, Senor J. Perez Caballero, who is Spanish Ambassador at the Holy See, is prepared to urge the denunciation of the concordat with the Vatican. He is now on his way from Rome.

The cabinet has issued an official communication declaring that pacification and liberty will be the keynotes of its policy.

It was reported to-day that one of the first radical moves of the new ministry would be to apply the common law to the religious orders that are engage din industry.

For the first time since the Ferrer case some has prominence Señor Alfonso drove through the streets absolutely unguarded to-day. On every side he was greeted with respect and enthusiasm. He completed an open carriage with Queen Victoria and the raisers were cheered as they passed. This drive has done much to reinstate the King in the good graces of his people.

Among the incidents in the aftermath of the ministerial crisis, the challenge to a duel made by Senator Ortega and Deputy Soriano to the former Minister of the Interior, Senor Juan de Cierra, today attracted much attention. De in Cierra is also the defendant in several libel actions brought by journalists.

Senator Ortega's prosecution was defended a short time ago by the Captain-General of Catalonia, who aroused him of leading an attempt to burn a Jesuit college in Barcelona.

FERRER LETTERS TELL INJUSTICE OF HIS SLAYING

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Two letters written by Francisco Ferrer while he lay in Barcelona prison, awaiting execution for alleged anarchism and revolutionary acts against Spain, have been received by the AMERICAN and are as follows:

They have given up the secret wherein they have kept me in connection with the last month, and I have been unable to receive any letters or papers. I will try and tell you my misfortune.

From my letter dated Sept. 10 you know that I was absolutely ignorant of the plan of a general strike by the workmen, as protest against the war in Morocco.

And I do not know how the idea was spread that I was responsible for it, as I was not.

However it was, I was not careful, as I had not been interested in this movement and thought that I should be left alone. But, very much frightened, a member of my family from Alicia, who had heard a little girl say that I, Ferrer, was a chief of Bretagne, had started the fire in the clothier at Premia.

Refused to Stay at Friends.

This gave no reason to think, remember, that no clothier at Premia existed. I decided to call on the Governor, and protest against such false reports, even if they came from older up.

Ill-Treated by Police.

I left the house of my friends in the night of August 31 so as to arrive at Barcelona without incident and present myself as a man must.

But I had not counted on the "Sunday" coming, police in the train village, who arrested me, and notwithstanding my plea to be taken before the Judge, they brought me to the Governor of Barcelona.

The foreigners, who all know me, are very genial, this especially, by name of Miralles, who after putting the cuffs on very tight, with a rope, tires threatened me with his rifle, saying that I was the worst man on earth, according to what he had heard and read in the papers.

For six hours they kept me at City Hall. I asked for something to drink; they brought me a glass of fresh water, but Miralles would not loosen the rope so as to enable me to drink. He would pour it into my mouth.

When I refused to submit to this, he did away with the water without letting me have a taste of it. This is an incident of the spiritual condition of the carried's toward me.

Protest In Jain.

Then we came to the Governor of Barcelona, who, in answer to my protest, said that the reading of the books issued by the modern school might be made responsible for the riots and I consequently was held responsible.

On September 1 in the evening I appeared before the Judge of instruction. I got the impression that my case was finished, and that my commitment would be only temporary. But four days elapsed before I had to appear. When I appeared on the 6th day it was just before the same judge.

He, with the aid of a commander by the name of Valerio Pazo, His first work was to read my commitment, which my two military physicians to see if there was any sign of my having been hurt. They examined me carefully from head to foot, but found nothing. I had been hurt in any way it would have been quite certain. But they could not find a shot instantly.

On September 9 came the first hearing, when much stress was laid on the fact that I had a hand and Furnemont, a bibliographic piece for a freethinkers' calendar, as I had stated not to be any one of my books. I gave an explanatory party and only interested myself in the work, only to refute therein antagonistic views, as there I had stated contrary to my thoughts.

Recalled Old Case.

He then pointed out all kinds of documents, but I answered him that all this had been gone over during my case in 1906-07.

But here I met terrible piece. A revolutionary call the police found on me—a piece that I never even had occasion to be very old. The Judge told me that this was found in the house of my brother, my sister and Soledad.

I told him I did not know how it got there, and, further, I had never seen it.

The Spain is spoken of the burning of cloisters, the doing away with congregations and the ruining of banks.

I was to be held responsible for all this, although I had not had anything to do with it. Ten days passed and when, on the 19th I underwent a second hearing, I protested anew against this piece in my dossier, saying that it was false where it said the call had been found in the presence of my family.

Held Without Hearing.

By the search of the house at Monjuic they found, after twelve hours searching, three pieces. One from Charles Albert to my brother, one from Antonia Lorenza, who spoke about a loan of 900 pesetas for the Solidarid Obrera, and a letter to me and an old correspondence with Lerroux.

The Judge brought forth a revolutionary call from 1892, during the fortifications of Barcelona, and said:

The Judge wanted to see connection with this letter and my family, and proposed now—seventeen years later. The Judge then asked me in a great anxiety.

I promised myself to protest strongly by the end of the week. The Judge told me that the research in regard to the dossier at Barcelona had said or caused the dossier at Barcelona had said or gave to appear before the court-martial, and that I would have time to defend my case from a list of officers of the army whom I did not know.

No Air or Light.

I answered that I had made complaints in regard to the action of the police. The Judge answered that the military law was in force, not the civil law.

So it is all over. I shall soon be convicted by the people without sufficient right, and they would not even investigate the cause for which I am held responsible. This is confirmed in memoran, if I can get too tired now.

Only Saturday I was given the secret confinement has been very hard in an unwholesome cell, without air or light, and the criminal food.

One must be strong to endure all this. FERRER.

The second letter was written to the same friend from the same prison on September 3. It reads:

To Blame for All Riots.

Notwithstanding my seemingly clear innocence, the Fiscal demands capital punishment on the ground of accusations made by the police. These accusations represent me as the leader of anarchists in the whole world, leader also of the C. G. T. of France, leader of riots and uprisings wherever they are found.

They claim that my travelling to London and Paris was all with these purposes in view. And it is with the words that I have been confined since the 31st. FERRER.

P. S.—The whole dossier drawn up by the judge of investigation and the police is full of lies and malevolent insinuations. But not a schilla of proof has been brought against me, nor could be brought, for there is nothing that I have done. Good-bye, friend. FERRER.

President Falliéres to Resign in 4 Months?

PARIS—Rumors are current that M. Falliéres will resign the presidency soon. Naturally, no official confirmation of the report can be obtained. Although government officials doubt, or pretend doubt, these whispers, the public gives them credence. The Cri De Paris, weekly newspaper, seems well informed and with strong political connection quotes an anonymous personality as saying: "A new President will be chosen within four months." Already a discussion about M. Falliéres' probable successor has begun. M. Brisson, president of the Chamber of Deputies, is mentioned oftenest as most likely to follow; but Maurice Berteaux, a deputy and a former minister, is spoken of as a "dark horse."

Awaiting Lombroso's Ghost.

LONDON—A dispatch from Rome says the appearance of the ghost of the late Professor Cesare Lombroso is being looked forward to with extraordinary interest by the Italian Spiritualistic Society, before his death the professor announced that after his decease he would place himself in communication with the latter through the medium whose aid he had conducted many experiments since 1895. W. T. Stead stated to-night that he, Stead, had the professor's intention to report himself from the next world. Mr. Stead declined, however, to express an opinion on the possibility of the success of the experiment.

Vesuvius Getting Uneasy.

NAPLES—Vesuvius, according to the local press, shows signs of activity. Tourists visiting the volcano have seen small showers of ashes and heard muffled rumblings. Experienced guides say that the phenomena are due, as in previous similar cases during the past three years of tranquility, to the obstructions of the steam outlets in the crater by the caving in of parts of the cone. Steam accumulates and finally forces a passage, accompanied by an explosion and showers of ashes.

Socialists Gain in Germany.

BERLIN—The Social Democrats have won a considerable success in the balloting for members of the Saxon Diet. They control sixteen seats outright and have fifty-seven candidates who may be successful in the final contest on November 2. The last Saxon Diet was composed of eighty-two members. There was only one Social Democrat in that body. The victory of the Social Democrats is attributed to a general discontent over the new taxation recently imposed.

Russians for Hawaii.

HONOLULU—The immigration agent who accompanied Councilsooner Atkinson to Manchuria to secure Russians to take the places of Japanese laborers on sugar plantations in Hawaii says over 100,000 Russian peasants in Manchuria want to go to Hawaii. Hundreds of families pleaded for a chance when Atkinson selected thirty families to come over. These people can't make a living in Siberia.

HAVANA—The Public Prosecutor presented the State's case against Postmaster Nodarse, who in July shot and wounded Senor Ferriera, the editor of the Diario Comica, because the latter had published a cartoon reflecting upon the relations between Senora Nodarse and President Gomez. WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Commander Robert E. Peary, the Arctic explorer, has telegraphed to scientific friends here that it was impossible for Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, to have seen any of the records of Peary's dash to the North Pole party, and that any information which Rasmussen may have received therefore was first hand.

The whole story told in Rasmussen's report of his impressions of Dr. Cook, recently made public by Mrs. Peary, is of a highly improbable character, is the substance of Peary's latest message.

FIREBUG BLAZE DESTROYS OLD HALL

BERWICK, Me., Oct. 23.—The Beaver Dam Grange hall one of the best in this section of the state, was totally destroyed by fire of incendiary origin.

Both the rear and front of the building were ablaze when the firemen arrived and the windows had been nailed to prevent an entrance and thus prevented any effort to save the building. This is the second time that the Beaver Dam Grange hall has been made last August. An investigation is being held. The building was one of the best furnished in Maine. The loss is said to be $16,000.

McFarland escaped, abandoning a wife and five little children. After years of roaming he settled down in the wild east county of southern West Virginia and began life anew under the name of Press Carter. He married and reared about him a family of children.

A Physician Cures His Wife of Consumption

It Costs You Nothing Try the Same Treatment.

Gentlemen:

My wife was down with Consumption when I ordered a bottle of Alsocl (Lloyd). She was cured from night sweats, cough and in a few days I noticed a change for the better after the first treatment and from that time on on to health. She is now a well woman and has been for the last two years. I have given Alsocl (Lloyd) to others and it is the only remedy for Consumption that will cure. I have used it in my family as well as a cure. It should be used by those who are afflicted with Consumption, Bronchitis and Throat Troubles. It can be confidently said that Alsocl (Lloyd) is the most wonderful compound of the present age.

Yours truly, H. KNIGHT, Secretary.

This is only one of hundreds of similar letters from leading physicians and grateful patients that we have received and have on file in our office.

So sure are we that Alsocl (Lloyd) is a successful treatment for Consumption and Chronic Bronchitis, and that you will feel its beneficial effects inside of fifteen days, that we will gladly send a full month's treatment to any sufferer who will send us their name and address.

We make no conditions except that you take the treatment for fifteen days, according to directions. Should the results be such as to make you absolutely sure that a continuance of Alsocl (Lloyd) will cure you, you are to remit us $5.00 for same and continue the treatment to its end. If, after taking the treatment for fifteen days, you are not satisfied with the results, you are to return the unused portion of the treatment to us and no charge will be made for what you have used.

Judd Q. Lloyd, the originator of the discovered this wonderful preparation, was, on December 4th, 1906, awarded a diploma of merit by the London Society of Science, Letters and Art, in recognition of his valuable service to mankind in discovering Alsocl (Lloyd), the only known successful treatment for consumption. The society was established in 1885, for the purpose of meriting the one greatest achievement in scientific discoveries each year, in each country.

Alsocl (Lloyd) is a perfectly palatable preparation. You take absolutely no risk whatever, for Alsocl (Lloyd) must be entirely satisfactory to you before you buy or use one cent. The burden of the proof is entirely on us. Alsocl (Lloyd) has done for others it should do for you. Send your name and address to-day, and you will get express office and we will send you a full month's treatment for trial with full directions. MILLIONS IN FRAMINGHAM NOTE FORGERY

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Oct. 23.—Expert accountants today at work on the books and papers of deposed Town Treasurer John B. Lombard discovered notes amounting in all to millions which have been uttered in the past to conceal the defalcations and forgeries of Lombard.

Lombard, who fell ill, is slowly growing weaker. Under the fearful strain and weight of the crime with which he is charged he is growing worse hourly. Today he could give the expert accountants but little aid as they worked on the books and papers and totalled up the notes into the millions which were made and canceled from time to time to cover the stealings. The next loss to the town, it is believed, will not much exceed $25,000.

As a result of the uncovering of the larcenies of Lombard the school teachers of South Framingham today drew no money for their services. It is impossible to pay them yet because the new town treasurer, Art or Fitts, has not qualified, and until his bonds are signed and approved by the Selectmen the teachers will have to wait. The town owes them $2,000.

Chairman William H. Walsh of the Board of Selectmen said that if Fitts qualified today for his office that the teachers could get their money.

The law officers engaged on the Lombard town note forgeries case have, it is said, found several checks made payable to the town by buyers of the notes which were indorsed over to Charles E. Cummings by Town Treasurer Lombard and indorsed by Cummings for deposit to his account.

This fact, they say, has a double significance. First, it goes to prove the truth of Lombard's statement that he did not benefit by the illegal transactions. Second, it goes to support the charge of larceny upon which Cummings is held.

The existence of this evidence is due to the caution used by bankers who bought the notes. Satisfied of their validity, they undertook to see that the town of Framingham received the money paid for them, and, instead of drawing their checks to the order of Cummings, made them payable to the treasurer of the town. In these instances, the authorities allege, Lombard did not deposit the checks, but after indorsing them handed them to Cummings in dupicate of

CZAR MEETS VICTOR UNDER GREAT GUARD

RACCONIGI, Italy, Oct. 23.—Czar Nicholas of Russia arrived here to-day to the booming of guns and a military display seldom equalled in modern times on similar occasions. An army was drawn up to salute him, and for miles the royal train passed between unbroken lines of troops. Fifty thousand men guarded the ruler of the Russias.

The meeting of the Czar and Italy's King is one of the most important events of its kind in years. Its object is to plan to check Austria in the Balkans.

Although there was a touch of simplicity about the actual greeting between the Czar and King Victor Emanuel, the two monarchs were surrounded by their courts, and the surrounding country resembled the scene before a battle, so thick were the troops.

Little chance was left for a demonstration against the Czar. All the suspects who might lead in any manifestation had been arrested and every possible precaution was taken to prevent either a show of disapproval or a more serious attempt. Nevertheless it could not be denied that there was danger.

Her fur busby bore in front the grim skull and cross-bones shining in silver.

CONTROVERSY AT BROCKTON ENDED TO-DAY

After nearly eighteen months of controversy, the differences between the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union was settled today and a new working agreement was signed.

By the terms of the agreement, which is signed by John S. Keat and T. J. Evans for the Brockton Shoe Manufacturers' Association and President John F. Tobin and C. L. Baine for the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, conditions and wages are restored to the basis that existed when the Douglas company first commenced to remove its factories from Brockton. These conditions will exist for thirty working days, during which time a new agreement will be formed. Failing in this effort, the whole matter will be left for adjustment by the State Board of Arbitration.

The agreement is dated to-day, and says in part:

"For the purpose of promoting the harmony and welfare of Brockton, and keeping it in the front rank as the most peaceful and prosperous shoe city in the world the Brockton Shoe Manufacturers' Association appointed a committee for the purpose of bringing about an adjustment of the controversy between the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union."

One of the features of the agreement is that the Douglas Company agrees that all of its factories outside of Brockton shall be placed under the Union Stamp arbitration agreement previous to January 1, 1910. The Douglas Company also agrees to give preference of employment to all former Douglas employes who are out of employment at the time of the settlement.

President John F. Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, when asked to-day whether he considered the agreement between the Douglas Shoe Factory and the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union a victory for his organization, said:

"Well, now, it wouldn't do for us to come out and crow over the agreement. You can say from me though that the agreement is entirely satisfactory both to us and to the Douglas people."

A telegram was sent to Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor today as follows:

"Samuel Gompers, A. F. of L., Washington, D. C.:

"Every detail of Douglas controversy adjusted. Settlement and arbitration papers signed to-day. All of company's factories will be organized immediately under the Union Stamp Agreement.

TAFT TELLS TEXANS HE HAS NO CASH

By WILLIAM HOSTER.

HOUSTON, Tex., Oct. 23.—President Taft reached here at 7:10 a. m. to-day. Breakfast was served on the train, and it was not until 8:30 that the reception committee took hold of the President for his two-hour whirl about the city. Early as the hour was a big crowd gathered and the President received a military salute and was cheered heartily as he left the train.

Proceeding to the Rice Hotel the President delivered an address from the balcony before a crowd of 10,000 people. A motor ride about the city followed and at 10:30 a. m. the party left for Dallas.

Speaking at Beeville last night the President advocated the establishment of postal savings banks.

"Where do you put your money, Billy?" asked a man in the crowd.

"I haven't any to put," replied the President. "When you have been in politics as long as I have been you will understand there is mighty little money to save."

Just prior to his speech to-day the President was welcomed to the city by Miss Kate Daffan, president of the Texas division, Daughters of Confederacy. The President said he was glad to be welcomed to the South by the men, but he regarded himself particularly to have the confidence of the ladies of the South. He had not proceeded far in his address when he complimented the crowd on the beauty of their women.

"Cut it out," cried a voice from the crowd, amid great laughter. "It's taffy."

PLEA OF WOMAN WINS HER FREEDOM

PLYMOUTH, Oct. 23.—The whispered plea of Mrs. Alice Aldrich, a cripple, made to Chief Justice Aiken in court to-day, saved her from a fifteen months' sentence in the women's prison at Sherborn. She was arraigned after being brought from Canada under the new Canadian immigration law. Joseph H. Smythe was brought back with her.

The two were found guilty of a statutory offence. Mrs. Aldrich was sentenced to fifteen months and Smythe received a like sentence. When sentence was announced Mrs. Aldrich asked permission to speak to Judge Aiken. Painfully she made her way with the aid of crutches to the judge's desk. Then she whispered to him.

Judge Aiken appeared to be moved by what she said and announced that he withdrew her sentence. He took three months from Smythe's sentence. Mrs. Aldrich then left with her brother and will go to Tennessee.

POLICE RAID POOL ROOM AT ROXBURY

The poolroom of John F. Peterson at No. 800 Tremont street, Roxbury, was raided by the police of Station 10 early this morning and seven men in all were captured and the entire furnishings of the place, valued at nearly $2,000, were seized. It is alleged that a game of "Kelley" pool was in progress at the time.

The proprietor, John F. Peterson, was locked up charged with conducting a gaming nuisance. Others who gave their names as Edward Bryan, Leo Scott, James Hudson, Arthur Reed, Fred O'Brien and Barney De Lora were locked up charged with being present.

The goods seized included eight pool tables, and their outfits.

LYNN MAN DEAD IN AUTO WRECK

Injuries received when an automobile in which he was riding near Savage, Md., plunged over an embankment and turned turtle this afternoon, caused the death of Everett W. Pecker, a prominent shoe manufacturer of Lynn, at the University Hospital at Baltimore, according to dispatches received from that city. The auto turned out to avoid a rural mail wagon.

Mr. Pecker was a member of the firm of E. W. Pecker & Co., shoe manufacturers, with factories at No. 12 Willow street, Lynn. He had his residence in Swampscott. He had been a resident of Lynn practically all his life. He was fifty-six years old and leaves a widow, one son and a daughter.

EMPTY RIVER TO RECOVER GIRL'S HEAD

FALL RIVER, Oct. 23.—Quequechan River, which flows through Fall River close to the "office" of "Dr." Frank Hill, accused of the murder of Amelia St. Jean, is being searched to-day by volunteers in the hope that it may yield the much-sought head of the slain girl.

The water has been drawn from the river. Hope of finding the head, if it was dropped into this stream, is based upon the fact that there are screens in Quequechan River, which would likely keep the head from being carried down the stream.

Another search will be made to-morrow of the farm of M. J. Kane on High road and of the wooded section back of the farm. This search is inspired by the statement of Sydney Johnson, a Fall River mill hand, who says that while gathering mushrooms two weeks ago to-morrow—the Sunday after Amelia St. Jean's death—he saw a man resembling "Dr." Hill. The mysterious man carried a bundle.

The officials, however, have not much hope of finding the head unless it is stumbled upon accidentally. Every place that reason has suggested as a possible hiding place has been thoroughly and systematically searched, without results.

The officials, too, are not so eager to find the head as they have been. The dismembered body has been satisfactorily identified as that of Amelia St. Jean, and the cause of death has been determined to the satisfaction of the medical men. Of course the recovery of the head would help the prosecution, but it is not absolutely necessary, as it was thought to be two days ago before expert medical examination had been made.

District Attorney James M. Swift expects to ask for a continuance, when "Dr." Hill is arraigned on the charge of murder Monday, but John J. Higgins, attorney for Hill, says he is ready to go on with the hearing.

PECKHAM'S ILLNESS A DELAY TO COURT

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—The illness of Justice Rufus W. Peckham at Altamont, N. Y., is being closely watched by many persons in public life here. Neither Justice Peckham nor Justice Moody, who is now ill in Massachusetts, has appeared in Washington since the opening of the full term of the Supreme Court, though the latest reports from Justice Moody are favorable. The work of the court goes on without appreciable delay, but the cases assigned to the absentees for the writing of decisions will probably be held up for some time.

PLOT TO DRIVE M'CARTHY OUT NOW REPORTED

Republican circles are agitated again today over rumors of sweeping changes in the administration of the Boston Custom House. It was said to-day that Surveyor of the Port McCarthy will not be permitted to finish out his term of office, and that if he does not resign he will be forced out. He has held his office for ten years. The salary is $5,000 a year, and it is regarded as one of the best federal positions in New England.

Mr. McCarthy lives in Charlestown, and has been a power in Republican politics there for nearly a generation. He has always been looked upon as one of Senator Lodge's most trusted and efficient lieutenants.

That he is now persona non grata to the Lodge machine is a political sensation. He was one of the staunchest supporters of Lodge when, as a member of the Legislature, he voted for the latter for United States Senator.

Colonel Lyman will resign and leave his office on April 1 next, and what that should have to do with the retirement of Mr. McCarthy is a political question of deep interest. It is understood that Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Lyman are not on good terms and that the surveyor has not hesitated at times to make it disagreeable for his chief, the collector. If Mr. McCarthy still retained Senator Lodge's favor, politicians believe that Mr. Lyman's going or coming would have no effect upon the fortunes of the former.

It is also rumored the Lodge machine is disposed to deprive Colonel James O. Lyford of Concord, N. H., of the post of naval officer of the port of Boston. The salary is $5,000 a year, and for many years it has been the custom to appoint a New Hampshire man to this position.

A SUNDAY AMERICAN want advt. is often the road to fortune.

NOT 'BOUGHT' BUT 'BROUGHT' SAYS GLIDDEN

"Brought," not "bought," was the word used by Councillor Walter S. Glidden of Somerville when he told a Cambridge audience how his home city is going to bring out the Republican vote on election day. So says Mr. Glidden himself. Here is the way a stenographer caught Glidden's speech:

"We are going to get out every Republican vote in Somerville if they have got to be dragged, coaxed or bought."

Persons who attended the gathering where Glidden delivered the address in question say that they understood him to say "brought." They took it as a joke. When the speech appeared in cold print, however, the Republican leaders became worried.

Glidden, who is a member of Governor Draper's Executive Council and one of the most liberal contributors to Republican campaign funds, knows that votes will forgive the stenographer who "made the mistake."

Candidates Valney and Foss had a lot of fun with the Glidden "mistake" at last night's Democratic rally in Wendell's. They would like to know, if it won't be too much trouble for Councillor Glidden to answer, just what he means by offering to contribute $1 for every $10 contributed to the U. O. P. campaign fund by other persons.

VAHEY AND DRAPER ON EIGHT-HOUR BILL

VAHEY, at Worcester—"If I am Governor next year, and the Eight-hour bill comes to me, I will sign it the minute it reaches my office."

DRAPER, at Weymouth—"I voted the Eight-hour bill, AND I'D DO IT AGAIN."

WOMAN CANDIDATE FOR LEGISLATURE

BALTIMORE, Md., Oct. 23.—Judge Stockbridge of the City Court rendered a decision under which the Board of Supervisors of Elections will be compelled to place on the ticket to be voted next month the name of Mrs. Anna Smith Lane as a candidate of the Socialist party, for the House of Delegates of the Maryland Legislature, the board having refused to place her name on the ticket because of part that President Falleres of France is about to retire.

CRISTY AGAIN SCORES GUILD IN EDITORIAL

The Worcester Telegram, edited by E. P. Cristy, a loyal Draper man, who loves Governor Governor Guild as Every loves Ivy Cook, gives vent to these paragraphs in its editorial column to-day:

"We welcome the next governor to our party. He has adopted every plank in our platform."—David F. O'Connell's reference, last night to Curtis Guild, Jr.

You cannot fool David on Democrats. David will have Curtis up here to vote for him the next time he runs for Mayor.

Every Democratic paper in Worcester and elsewhere, as well as Democratic politicians, appear to be solicitous for Curtis. That proves that he is a Republican, of course. They never permit a word to be said against a Republican, unless it is to call him a horse thief.

All the Democratic speakers are now answering the New York World's standing question: "What is a Democrat?" In chorus they shout—"Curtis Guild, Jr."

There is another question they also answer correctly—in private—and that is: Who helped them frame up the bills which were "put up" to John L. Bates when he was governor, with the design of putting Governor Bates "on a hook?" Same answer—Curtis Guild, Jr.

The defeat of Governor Bates following the pandemonium resulting was part of the conspiracy to exalt Curtis.

MY! CANDIDATE HILL SMOKES A CORN COB

JOSEPH C. PELLETIER was picked as the Democratic candidate for District-Attorney because, like Arthur D. Hill, he was a "better element chap" and not a "gang man."

Hill made the rounds last night by touring South Boston, wearing a slouch hat and smoking a corn-cob pipe.

Rally followers are anxiously waiting to see what Pelletier will do to-night.

JUSSERAND BACK, MUM ON FERRER

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Ambassador Jusserand of France, returned to America to-day on the liner La Provence. He refused to discuss the demonstrations in France over the execution of Ferrer by Spain nor would he make any comment on the report that President Falleres of France is about to retire.

DRAPER READY TO GIVE PROOF ON FOSS LETTER, HE DECLARES TO-DAY

Governor Draper addressed a gathering of officers of Republican city and town committees of Norfolk county at the Parker House this afternoon. The dinner was given by Frederick Charles Draper, son of the Norfolk Republican committee, who presided.

Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and Congressman Weeks of Newton were guests. The city and town chairmen were impressed by Chairman Pearson with the need for getting out a big Republican vote on November 2.

Governor Draper said in part:

"I have noticed in the papers to-day a so-called 'open letter' from Mr. Foss to me about the letter or petition which he sent me some months ago in regard to the so-called eight-hour bill. This letter or petition has been printed in the newspapers and by the Republican Club of Massachusetts in circular form, exactly as I received it.

Quotes From Letter.

"It is being circulated by the Republican Club, and if Mr. Foss desires to have a copy of this circular I shall be very glad to send him one if he wants to see the original document I shall be very glad to show it to him, as I am taking most excellent care of it for fear that it might be lost or that it might meet with some untoward accident while out of my possession. It is a typewritten letter or petition, signed with pen and ink with one signature only, and that was 'E. V. Stanyan.' Mr. E. V. Foss, I presume.

"The question, and the only question in regard to the whole matter and that is the only of importance because Mr. Foss is running as the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, is whether he urged me either by petition or letter to veto [illegible] so-called eight-hour bill.

"In the last paragraph of the letter or petition which he sent me it is stated as follows: 'The enactment into a law of * * * will prove detrimental to the interests of the people of the several counties, cities and towns; to our interests as employers, and also to the interests of our employees.'

"Further along it says: 'We believe that such a law is not needed for the protection of the working people, or desired by the majority of the people of the State. We believe that such a law would be unconstitutional. For these and other reasons we hope and trust that you will veto the bill. Yours respectfully, E. F. Stanyan Company, E. V. Foss, treasurer.'

Attacks Foss's Course.

"The bill passed by the Legislature and which came to me was House Bill No. 1,503, and that was the bill which I vetoed. I assume that when Mr. Foss signs a document in his own handwriting and sends it to me for whatever influence it may have on me, he acts knowingly and is in favor of that which is stated above his signature.

"He says: 'I never repudiated my signature, for I never gave it after anything that I am ashamed of or afraid to have see the light of day.' My question to him is to follow his own advice and not attempt to repudiate it or to befog the issue.

"He gives me some suggestions as to the only thing that is done 'among honorable men' and suggests that there is only one honest course to take. Without the slightest desire to criticise either his honor or his honesty, I should prefer to rely on my own judgment in regard to these matters rather than to take his standards. I think I have stated the facts in this matter exactly as they are.

Contradicts Vahey.

"I notice that in Mr. Vahey's speech at Worcester last night he makes an attack on the present Governor of Somerville for something which he did not say, and states that one speech was made in the presence of Governor Draper. Mr. Glidden has made no speech in my presence. I suggest to Mr. Vahey that he be accurate in his statements.

"I do not think Mr. Vahey need be troubled about the use correct or otherwise of money in this campaign, because if the popular understanding of the matter is correct, the Democratic party is being extremely well financed this year."

FOSS DECLARES VETO LETTER WAS IN PETITION FORM

Eugene N. Foss, in a sharp retort to Governor Draper in connection with the controversy over Mr. Foss's communication on the eight-hour bill veto, insists that his signature as treasurer of the E. V. Stanyant Company was attached to a petition instead of a letter. Mr. Foss's statement in part is as follows:

"I challenged you to reproduce a photographic copy of any letter of mine on that subject that you claim I sent you.

"Did you do it?

"No!

"You couldn't do it, for I never wrote you or caused to so written to you any such letter. It wasn't in existence.

"What did you do?

"You had a photograph of the signature of the E. V. Stanyant Company, E. N. Foss, treasurer,' made and submit that as proof. This signature had been cut off the petition which I signed. Why didn't you leave it on as it was and print the whole thing in facsimile?

"I demand that you have a photographic reproduction of the whole 'letter' made as it was originally in your possession before it was mutilated by orders from you or some one acting for you.

"Now, Governor Draper, you know that when I write a letter about my business affairs, I don't send it out mutilated on blank stationery. It is always on my own letter headings and bears a date.

"I demand to know from you if this was not an 'identical' petition, similar in every word, line and phrase, to many petitions all prepared from the same copy and sent around as a petition to be signed by manufacturers to bolster up your veto?

"You know that many, many others signed that same petition, or exact copies of it. It was presented to me; I signed it, handed it back to the one who brought it, and he took it away with him. If it had been a letter from me to you I should have mailed it."

HOSPITAL HOLDS DONATION DAY

The annual donation day of the Convalescent Home and Children's Hospital at Wellesley Hills was held to-day. Gifts of linen, groceries, vegetables and money flowed into the institution all day. The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Oliver W. Peabody, Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mrs. Horatio G. Curtis and Mrs. John H. Monks. The committee which showed the visiting crowds around was composed of Mrs. A. Windsor Weil, Mrs. Frank Wells, Mrs. H. L. Young, Mrs. F. W. Thayer, Mrs. F. H. Grattan, Miss Elizabeth Ehnee, Miss Barbara Higginson, Mrs. R. S. Amory, Mrs. F. B. Cutler, Mrs. W. S. Patten and Mrs. T. M. Garfield.

POLICE REBUKED BY JUDGE IN COURT

Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster to-day administered a stinging rebuke to the police force. He was hearing the case of Hyman Garan of Chambers street, who was charged with non-support by his wife. The woman had a very weak voice, and the Judge summoned her to the bench where he could hear her. Suddenly stepping her as she was making her complaint against her husband, the Justice said:

"It is impossible to hear anything in this court. The police officers here talk too much and too loudly. Hereafter I will have the court officer take the names of the police officers who are talking and have them sent to the superintendent and the commissioner of police."

At the time there were about fifteen policemen sitting on the benches in the courtroom. Garan's case was placed on file.

UNITED STATES MAY MIX IN NICARAGUA

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 23.—That the United States is either to intervene in the Nicaragua revolution or officially recognize the insurgents is indicated here to-day in the sailing of the steamer Dictator for Bluefields.

Despite the closing of the Atlantic ports of Nicaragua by President Zelaya the department of commerce and labor authorized Port Collector McCall to clear the Dictator and she sailed at noon carrying United States Consul Trimmer of Cape Gracias and a big cargo of merchandise and supplies.

Nicaraguan Consul Gonzalez protested to-day to the ship's manifest, but his action has been ignored, indicating that the government is about convinced that the insurgents under Estrada have overpowered the Zelaya government.

METEOR HITS SCHOOL.

WATERBURY, Ct., Oct. 23.A meteor fell at Mansfield during the night, damaging the Storrs School and the residence of Prof. Chamberlain. The roof of the Chamberlain house was splintered. A big gully was cut in the earth where the meteor finally landed. The impact of the meteor against the house threw the members of the Chamberlain family from their beds.

Several persons saw the meteor fall, among them being P. C. Gunther, F. H. White and Frank McClean.

Political Notes of Both Parties

The Hill campaigners are of the opinion that candidate Pelletier's campaign has been tame and they plan on letting loose some issue that will smoke the other side out and put them on the defensive. The first surprise is promised for Hill's rally Monday evening.

The district attorney contest has now reached the betting stage. "If you see any Hill money floating around, I have $5,000 to bet on Pelletier at even money," said a prominent sporting man to Patrick H. Kelley, one of Pelletier spellbinders.

Since Harvey N. Shepard made such a distinct hit at the Tremont Temple rally with his brief and forcible speech on Home Rule for Boston, the Democratic bosses are beginning to realize that there are other popular State issues in Boston besides the tariff.

John H. Murphy will address the first Plan Two rally to-night at 8:00 o'clock, the ward room on next Wednesday, and Redmond S. Fitzgerald will preside.

Colonel Joseph Lundy will formally open District Attorney Hill's campaign with a rally at Faneuil Hall to-night. Some matter that will be interesting to some of the Democratic bosses is promised.

TRAINS STALLED AS DRAW SETTLES

Thousands of commuters were held up and prevented from getting into Boston early to-day by an accident to the drawbridge over the Saugus River, near the plant of the General Electric Company, in West Lynn, which tied up the Eastern Division of the B. & M. R. R. A coal schooner attempted to pass through the drawbridge at 4 a. m. and succeeded in getting through all right, but after the drawbridge was raised it was found impossible to close it.

Traffic had to be sent over the Saugus branch and many business men and women were delayed two hours or more while the trouble was being fixed. The drawbridge is an old one and needed repairs badly.

THREE DEAD IN WRECK.

HAMILTON, O., Oct. 23.—Three men were killed and four probably fatally injured at Collinsville, O., when Pennsylvania passenger train No. 144, Chicago for Cincinnati, ran into an open switch and collided head on with a freight train.

Seventh Day Wonder of New England

BREAKFASTS WITH HUSBAND SHE'S SUING

In spite of the fact that the husband says that everything has been settled, Mrs. Nellie A. Wood of No. 25 Columbus avenue, Somerville, through her attorneys, to-day filed suit for divorce against Charles Wood of the firm of Wood Brothers, locksmiths. She charges unfaithfulness in the suit and filed an attachment of $10,000 against her husband's property.

Mr. Wood and his pretty artist wife are still living in the same house in Somerville and took breakfast there to-day.

The wife's filing of divorce papers took everyone in Somerville by surprise, as the Woods are well known. Mr. Wood didn't know a thing about ituntil to-day.

"I can't say anything about it," said Mr. Wood when asked about his wife's suit.

"Are you and your wife reconciled?" he was asked.

"Yes," he said promptly.

"Well, your mother-in-law, Mrs. Frances B. Brown, says you and your wife are not reconciled," he was told.

"Well, that is not so. Everything is all right. Everything has been fixed up," said Mr. Woods.

"It seems strange that Mr. and Mrs. Wood should live in the same house after a divorce has been filed by the wife?" was suggested to Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Wood's mother.

"Why shouldn't he live here?" demanded Mrs. Brown. "He owns half of this house."

Mrs. Brown denied that Wood and his wife had become reconciled. Mrs. Wood brought suit as the result of an alleged meeting between her husband and a young woman in Boston the other day. She kept her lips tightly sealed to herself about filing the suit.

Speaking about apparently friendly relations existing between her and her husband, she said:

"I can see no reason for acting otherwise and sacrificing my troubles. My husband is surprised, I know, but it had to come. I know that I shall be blamed for starting these proceedings, but things have gone on now until I could not stand it any longer without a protest. Those who know me will not believe wrong of me."

DEATH NEWS STUNS MOTHER OF M'CARREN

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—One of the most pathetic events that followed the death of Senator Patrick H. McCarren was the breaking of the news to Mrs. Mary McCarren, the late Senator's mother, who is eighty-seven years old. She lives at No. 87 Berry street, Brooklyn. Dr. Father Thomas J. Carroll of the Church of St. Vincent de Paul and Dr. William J. O'Brien this said task was delegated.

When the physician and the priest called on Mrs. McCarren she asked them if they had any news of her son. She did not even know that he had undergone an operation, this having been kept from her because it was feared the shock would prove fatal. Mr. McCarren himself insisted that she be kept in ignorance of his illness.

"Why Wasn't I Told."

"Have you any word from my son?" she said to Father Carroll.

"Mother McCarren," he answered, "We have sad news. You must bear up under it. Your son is dying—not dying now, but he is dead."

The aged woman clutched her throat with her hand and staggered. Dr. O'Brien sprang forward and supported her.

"Why wasn't I told before?" she sobbed. "If was his last wish that you be not informed of his illness," said the priest.

"That was always like him," moaned Mrs. McCarren. "He always loved his mother and thought of her first."

"But there is great consolation for you Mrs. McCarren," continued Father Carroll. "The last rites of the church were administered to him."

"It is a great consolation," she said, "I am thankful. It is God's will. Thy will be done. I am content that he died a Christian and a good Catholic."

Arranged for His Own Funeral.

The aged woman stood the shock wonderfully well for a time, but the weight was more than she could bear and she finally collapsed entirely and fell into a stupor. It was feared she could not recover from the shock. When Senator McCarren's brother said that there was no hope for his recovery, it was learned to-day, he prepared for his funeral. He called Chris Dalton to his bedside yesterday morning, and said: "I know that I am going to die. And Maggie Kane, George McCusky, his favorite cousin to look after all the arrangements for my funeral. I don't want my mother told until after I have gone. Tell her my Prince Albert suit is in a closet in my room. Let her get that suit and have it used for me. I want none of those rags the undertakers are apt to put around one. I want to be buried with a mass from the Church of St. Vincent de Paul, and I want Father Carroll to officiate."

The flags on the City Hall were lowered at half-mast to-day out of respect for the memory of Senator McCarren.

Japanese Baroness Opposes Votes for Women; Visitors from Nippon Guests in Boston To-day

From left to right—Baroness E. Shibusawa, Madam Z. Horikoshi, Madam K. Taki, Miss T. Takanashi, traveling companion of the Baroness. Photograph taken to-day by Boston American artist at South Station.

Before Mrs. Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes of England, had left Boston one of the richest and most influential women of new Japan arrived here and declared herself in opposition to votes for women. The daughter of Nipon is Baroness E. Shibusawa, wife of the distinguished Japanese who heads the Imperial Commercial Commission from the Mikado's realm. The commission is touring the United States to learn its manufacturing, mining, farming and commercial resources.

The commission arrived on a "millionaire special" from Providence at 8 o'clock, detraining at the South Station.

Baroness Shibusawa expressed through an interpreter her view of the suffrage question. Madam K. Midzuno, wife of the consul-general, translated her remarks. The Baroness said:

"I hope woman suffrage will never come to Japan. Conditions are so different in my country from what they are here that I cannot say whether it would be good for American women to vote.

"I am sure that the welfare of Japan and its women would be retarded thereby."

Puzzled by Servants.

"What is your view of the divorce question?" she was asked.

"I am very much surprised," replied the Baroness "to hear how prevalent divorce is in this country. Divorce is rare in Japan."

"What are your impressions of American women?

"They are very hospitable. They have been very kind and generous to me wherever I have been. I am very grateful for their hospitality. I do not know about the servant problem that is talked of here. We have no trouble in getting good servants in Japan. They stay with families many years. They are very faithful, too. It is easy to get and keep them."

The distinguished visitors were met at the station by a committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, consisting of Congressman J. W. Weeks, Walter C. Fish, George W. Brown, Rufus H. Stetson, honorary Japanese consul, and Shigeiro Yamanaka. In automobiles they were driven to the Hotel Vendome, which will be their headquarters during their stay.

Three Days Here.

Soon after arriving the party was divided into three sections, the first of which was taken to Quincy for an inspection of the Fore River Shipbuilding Plant, where luncheon will be served.

The second section went to Waltham to go through the Waltham Watch Factory. Luncheon will be served there also.

The third section, consisting of the ladies, visited the Longfellow house in Cambridge, and were taken to lunch at the Cosmos Club, Cambridge.

After their respective luncheons the second sections will join the ladies and will visit Harvard University, after which the entire party will witness the Harvard-Brown football game at Soldiers Field.

This evening the Chamber of Commerce will tender the commissioners a dinner at the Algonquin Club.

To-morrow's event will be a drive through the park system.

To-morrow evening they will be entertained at the Vendome by the Japanese Society of Boston and the Naples Club, which has several American members. On Monday they will visit the mills at Lowell and Lawrence, as well as one or two shoe factories. Their visit will come to an end on Tuesday, when they will start for Seattle, where they will embark for Japan.

Prominent in the party are Baron Shibusawa, "the John D. Rockefeller of Japan"; Michio Dai, president of the Osaka Chamber of Commerce; Kenzo Iwahara, a member of the greatest family of financiers in the Land of the Rising Sun; Buei Nakano, president of the Tokio Chamber of Commerce, and Naraso Takatsuji, manager of the Kanagawfuji Spinning Company. Other members of the party are educators, scientists, manufacturers and medical men.

Included in the list, too, is a large party of Philadelphians, who are booked for an extended tour of Europe. Miss Ida F. Robbins, Miss Lulu Robbins, Miss Edith P. Robbins and Winfield Robbins are from Arlington.

He also will serve as business representative of his own union during his term of office as president of the Central Labor Union.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Rear-Admiral Henry Erben died at his home, No. 130 East Fourty-fourth street, to-day. He was one of the oldest of American naval officers and served with distinction through the Civil War, having been stationed at the Pensacola Navy Yard at its outbreak.

WRIGHT TAKES 3 PASSENGERS

COLLEGE PARK, Md., Oct. 23.—Wilbur Wright made five flights this morning in ideal weather. On the first flight, which lasted eighteen minutes, Lieutenant Lahm was a passenger. With Lieutenant Humphreys Mr. Wright then made a flight of seven minutes. For the first time Lieutenant Foulois was permitted to assume a share in the operation of the biplane on the third flight, when lasted twelve minutes and thirty seconds. Lieutenant Lahm made a second trip with Mr. Wright of eleven minutes' duration.

The last flight, which Mr. Wright made alone, lasted twelve minutes and thirty seconds. On this trip Mr. Wright made several circles, in which the main surfaces of the biplane at times were at an angle of nearly thirty degrees with the ground.

He also flew over the closed kilometer course, for which he holds the record in 56 seconds. During all previous trips, both at College Park and at Fort Meyer, Va., the machine has been turned from right to left. To-day Mr. Wright reversed the proceeding and exhibited the same skill.

CLAIMS 800-MILE FLIGHT

PASADENA, Cal., Oct. 23.—Replying to skeptics of his claim of having made the record balloon flight of 800 miles in nine hours on April 20, 1861, Professor Thaddeus C. Lowe has telegraphed to South Carolina a copy of the certificate given him by the citizens of Edgefield, S. C., on the date of his flight, in which he is highly credit for the performance which still stands as the world's speed record.

"Although nearly forty years have passed since Lowe says he is planning to compete with the Wrights for aviation honors.

"I have the plans for a new airship," he said, "and expect to build it soon."

HERE FOR NEW OPERA.

Mrs. Henry Russell, wife of the director of the new Boston Opera House, will sail from Cherbourg on October 27 on the Adriatic, both at College Park and at Fort Meyer, Va., the machine has been turned from right to left. To-day Mr. Wright reversed the proceeding and exhibited the same skill.

FIRE BRINGS DRAPERS BACK

Mrs. Eben S. Draper and Miss Draper, wife and daughter of the Governor, arrived in Boston to-day, having come from Paris to New York on the Cunard liner Lusitania. They had been in Paris for two months.

"A horrible bore," said Mrs. Draper, "as soon as I learned of the fire in our home on Beacon street."

The fire happened on October 6 and did great damage to the interior, destroying priceless works of art and rare furniture.

BOY GRAY-HAIRED FROM OVERSTUDY

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Abraham Moeller, a fifteen-year-old schoolboy, was arraigned in the Essex Market Court for truancy yesterday at school. Magistrate Flammer noticed that his hair was turning gray. "What makes your hair gray?" he asked the lad, over hung his head and was silent. His father said: "Your Honor, it was overstudy that did it. I took him out of school to save him from getting gray hair."

BOSTON MAN HAS LUCK IN AFRICAN HUNT

William Lord Smith of The Hermitage, Willow street, Boston, who is hunting big game in British East Africa, in the vicinity of the Roosevelt expedition, has met with fine luck. Under date line of River Nzoia, near Mt. Kenia, Mr. Smith writes:

"We have been on our Safari expedition about three weeks now, and it is astonishing how smoothly everything runs in our camp of about eighty men. Everybody works hard from the hunters down to the porters who carry our baggage from place to place in their heads.

"Up every morning at 4:30, and after a hearty breakfast we scour the plains and forests in search of antelope, buffalo, rhinoceros, lion and leopard.

"Luck has come our way in fair amounts, and we have gathered in antelope, Thompson's gazelles, bush buck, water buck, oribi, impala, zebra, two rhinoceros, a lioness and a leopard. The latter two animals were both killed by Gerham Brooks, and were found in a small ravine, surrounded on three quarters, they feared vicinity of being disturbed while taking their daytime rest, and would have charged had they had the chance.

"Besides large game, Dr. Glover Allen has already secured a very interesting collection of birds and small mammals.

"As we are always travelling, before daylight, we heard a lion roar in the distance, and as soon as the sun was up on the prairie of brown grass, now capped with rain enough to lay the dust. Our head cook, and we could see far off on the plains a rhinoceros trailed by with tail erect, 200 yards to the left, and two beautiful cock ostriches not far from the right. My hunter saw two the eland and a herd of African antelopes on the run in line.

"We dismounted and after crawling a half mile, stopping now and always on one front, we came within shot and added a fine bull eland to our collection."

BRAZIL XMAS SHIP FAST LOADING HERE

Ice, pears and apples are being loaded in vast quantities into the holds of the big four-masted schooner Margaret Thomas at Mystic Wharf, for her annual Christmas pilgrimage to Brazil. There will be nearly one thousand barrels of apples aboard.

The schooner is Rio Janeiro's holiday boat. During most of the year down there they eat dining out when time comes they will have down their "ship comes in."

The Margaret Thomas will sail early, and without her the South Americans wouldn't have a good holiday.

TEAMSTERS GET K. OF L. CHARTER

With 100 signatures already affixed to the application for a charter, the Knights of Labor Teamsters assembled in the offices of Labor Leader Hanley yesterday afternoon to-day stated that the application would be presented to the Grand Master Workman and started by the election of officers at Faneuil Hall Building next Sunday afternoon. Up to this time the teamsters have been under the jurisdiction of the Chauffeurs, the regular American Federation of Labor organization.

How to Use the WASHINGTON STREET TUNNEL

The Washington Street Tunnel, between Haymarket Square on the north and Eliot and Kneeland Streets on the south, has eight stations. These stations, with their thirty entrances and exits, amount to almost a continuous station under Washington Street. From them it is only a few steps to retail stores, business offices, hotels, theatres, public buildings, institutions, courts, historic buildings and points, banking houses, clubs, newspaper offices, the Post Office, the Stock Exchange, the Relief Hospital, the markets, churches and other places of resort. Indeed, there are nowhere else in the world so many points of equal interest so accessible to any rapid transit thoroughfare.

Yet many do not appreciate the advantages of these stations. Many do not know where to find the entrances most convenient for their own use, and others are unaware of the superiority of this line over some of the surface lines.

In order that our patrons may have a better knowledge of the facilities supplied by this tunnel, we are publishing information concerning each of the stations.

STATE AUTO OFFICIALS MEET AND MAKE PLANS

By J. C. KERRISON.

The annual meeting of the board of officers of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association held at the rooms of the Bay State Association yesterday afternoon gave the men at the head of affairs an opportunity to rehearse the work of the past year and to make plans for the future. The several standing committees rendered their annual reports, which showed that good work had been done along legislative and good roads lines, as well as in strengthening the organization as a whole. The membership at present totals something like 1,100, while the finances are in the best condition imaginable. Q. D. Converse of Winchendon was elected president; John P. Coghlin of Worcester, vice-president, and James Forrestie of Boston, secretary and treasurer, the latter office being added to his duties owing to the disinclination of the former treasurer to longer continue in office, he having held that position for the past six years. Votes of thanks were extended to retiring President A. E. Bliss of Malden and retiring Treasurer J. C. Kerrison. The chairmen of the several standing committees are to be appointed in the near future by President Converse.

The Worcester Automobile Club will undoubtedly hold a three days' endurance contest during the month of January. This run will be under the A. A. A. rules and conditions, and will probably be something like 600 miles in length, 200 miles or more being run each one of the three days. The course has not yet been selected, but the probabilities are that it will be one that will bring the contestants into Worcester at least twice each day. The entry blanks for the run will be out in a few days. The club has already been assured of a sufficient list of entries to insure a success.

Eliot I. Lee, former president of the Bay State Automobile Association, will soon sail for abroad for the next seven or eight months. He will leave Boston in a few weeks, taking an American made car, and will spend considerable time touring the European continent.

With a number of racing cars and drivers on for practice, and the turns and banking in excellent condition, with superintendent, the Vanderbilt cup course on Long Island took on its additional picturesque appearance yesterday morning. From now until the day of the actual race—a week from next Saturday—these impromptu daylight trysts will furnish a true for the experts to figure out the ultimate winner of the race, and are well worth watching.

Yesterday there were only four cars on the course, including three Chalmers-Detroit cars and an Apperson.

The Chalmers trio were driven by Dingley, Knipper and Matson, while Hugh Harding, whose racing car is one of the speedy, drove around in an Apperson touring car.

Bill Knipper, in a Chalmers "30," made the best time of the day, 12 minutes and seconds for the 12.64-mile circuit, or better than 62 miles an hour for the first time out. Dingley and Matson were a little looser, but as the former was driving a thirty-horsepower car, and the latter "40," which he will use in the big race, the result was not surprising. Dingley ran out of gasoline on his second circuit of the course near the grandstand, and Matson had tire trouble, and Dingley's car showed a "cooler" on its rear axle in the back stretch, no other times were taken.

DARTMOUTH MAY PILE AGONY ON TO AMHERST

AMHERST, Oct. 23.—There is a classy game here to-day, with Dartmouth as the opposition against the Amherst eleven.

For twenty years the two teams have battled for supremacy on the gridiron, and to-day's struggle promises to be one to add to history.

Special trains from all the large cities for a rolling of fifty miles will carry football enthusiasts to this centre, for the contest has aroused widespread interest. Dartmouth looks formidable and has made a grand record in point scores, and the score of 17 to 0 against Williams last week strengthens the confidence of her supporters that she will wipe the purple off the map in to-day's clash.

While Amherst has been beaten by a small college team this year, the fact that she is to play Dartmouth, one of her worst rivals, has put more pep and fight over into the players, and they will play their hardest.

COLBY PICKED TO WIN FIRST MAINE COLLEGE GAME

LEWISTON, Me., Oct. 23.—The Maine college championship series will be opened at Garcelon field to-day with the game between Bates and Colby, and the interest makes a record-breaking attendance for a Colby game a certainty if the weather is good.

Colby is picked to win by the majority of the followers of the game in the State, but Bates is confident. Bates and Colby have met on the gridiron seventeen times and Bates has won ten games, Colby six, and the teams tied, 0 to 0, in 1897.

Bates will go into the game with the team not in the best condition, though the first string men will all be able to start. Captain Cummins has a bad leg, and Wade Andrews has been suffering all season with a badly injured eye, which has kept him out of several games and is still troubling him.

STRAIGHT DOPE
FOR SPORT FANS

WELL, JEFF HAS CAME. HE SAYS he'll fight, and the quicker it comes the better it will suit him. Fine business. I'm mighty glad to hear him talk that way. If he'll perform as he talks I'm strong for him, and will back up on any gaming I have been giving him for stalling, and I don't often back up on anything I say. But I'm going to wait awhile, and I won't get into the process until a little nearer time for him to step into the ring with the black champion. He's been talking so much about next March or April that I'm still suspicious about the long theatrical winter, so I'm going to wait and see.

BY THE WAY, DID YOU YAPPERS about "bringing back the title to the white race," notice that Jeff has tipped his mitt? What are you going to do now? In speaking of the proposed fight Jeff says:

"There will be a heap of money in it, and that is the real reason I am returning to the ring."

What about all that talk of the "honor of the Caucasian race" that Berger and Jeff were emitting when the black cloud first appeared on the fistic horizon and caused Jeff to leave the retirement of his alfalfa farm? It was that which got a lot of you ramor leaguers going on this "white race" business, and now it is only the coin he's after. How many of you would be shouting your knobs off if Jeff said double flavor is more money in a long vaudeville engagement and come out flat-footed and say so.

MANAGING A PENNANT-WINNING baseball team is rest work and a man who does it successfully should be well paid for it. Hughey Jennings received but a paltry $17,500 for his work during the season just closed, and I really think there should be a union to prevent such starvation wages being paid for skilled labor. Hughey undoubtedly is worth all of that and more—but enough to make his annual stipend $30,000 next year—and those bogerly and grasping owners of the Detroit club are looking about paying it. What would you do for $30,000? I'd hate to tell what I'd do even for $17,000.

I DON'T KNOW WHAT ALL THIS IS all about, but I'm getting it only in the hope that someone will kick in with a solution. If I can't get it any other way I'll send another Western Union boy to see —after Ernest, to coax him into my office long enough to have his head examined. What is it?

No. 5 Fellowy, West Medford, Mass.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Would you kindly advise me as to the best way to break into a minor league baseball team? I have played on one of the high school teams for three years, and I'm one of a class of managers to whom I recently wrote, asking if they did not want me. I would like to get started as soon as possible. I await your favorable reply.

CHARLES W. SEARS.

Write to the managers of some of the minor league teams about New England asking for a try-out in the Spring and you will likely get the chance.

HERE'S A LETTER WHICH REACHED me yesterday which is well worth reading and thinking over. It certainly interests me as much chance of the promoters getting together on title, and the rules governing the several bouts as though at present. What a great thing a commission of some sort would be, however, to govern boxing in this country. Then the officials dope out the titles, I'd be strong for it. As things now stand, it would be a difficult matter to throw a stone into any gathering of boxing fans without the missile promptly cop off the beans of several claimants to world's titles. I'd like to see such a commission, but who is going to frame it up?

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—Why do not promoters get together and form rules governing championship boxing contests? Everything is in a muddle at present and save trouble in future. Referees for such a commission could be chosen by the champions and the proceeds of competitions divided. Respectfully, ANTI-NOISE.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Will you kindly advise the following questions to settle an argument: Has Peter McKenna of Roxbury a decision over Jimmy Gardner of Lowell? An answer will greatly oblige. J. A. HARDING.

No. 53 State street, Boston.

Jimmy Gardner lost a bout to Patsy McKenna in Boston December 14, 1909, both boys being then in the 105-pound class.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Will you be kind enough to tell me who is the best middleweight boxer in Pittsburg and Chicago, in the National League, to date? Also, how many times has Jack Dillon from Pittsburg, it for Pittsburg was he seen during the season? Thanking you in advance, I am, Yours truly, P. E.

Pittsburg won thirteen from and lost nine to Chicago.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—Please answer the following questions: How many times has Yale defeated Harvard on the gridiron, and how many times has Harvard defeated Yale? Also, how many times has Yale been victorious in eleven, the other two being ties. From 1876 to 1890 Harvard won but one game from Yale.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Please answer the following: Does Jimmy Gardner, who was knocked out with Abe Attell, ever fight again? Also, was he a welterweight? Oblige, FRANK SCRIBT.

Plymouth, Mass.

Would like to accommodate you, Frank, but space prevents me from printing the names of his opponents in the fifty odd bouts he has fought. The only time he ever knocked out, according to my dope book, was August 20, 1906, at Quincy, Mass., when Bob Fitzsimmons put over the short end of a decision.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Herman Schaffhorst, the Medford pitcher, has signed to play with Somerville in the league for matches with any team at his weight. He pitched singles in the Medford league and is to box in one of the preliminary bouts at the Temple of Music, Feb. 22. He will be known as Al Delmond and Young Dixon is pitching for him in the box game. Can you give me any information as to same? Yours truly, H. W. PETTING.

Manager Herman Schaffhorst, Medford, Mass.

Never heard of Herman but there are a lot of boys who will meet him at School, and if he shows sufficient class the Armory Club will likely be able to use him.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—

The south Boston basket ball team has organized for the season and would like games with Amesbury Red Sox, Co. G. of Gloucester, Lowell Textile, Lawrence Textile and Haverhill. Thanking you in advance, I am, Yours truly, THOMAS F. MCDEVITT.

South Boston, Mass.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Albert Cutler, who won two exhibition games in 18.2 at Daly's Academy recording Cutler 200 to 81, with an average of 18 12-16, and a high run of 118, Cassell's best run was 24. He averaged 4 13-16.

KETCHEL TO RETIRE FOR LONG REST

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Oct. 23.—There seems to be little chance for a Langford-Ketchel or Papke-Ketchel fight in the near future. In an announcement to-day Willus Britt, manager of the Michigan "assassin," declared his charge would not be ready for a fight by Thanksgiving Day.

"I think that Ketchel is entitled to a rest," said he. "He has been a very busy man since I secured a handle to his name, and I will state positively that Ketchel will not be ready for fighting by Thanksgiving Day, nor will he put up either of the men now figuring on a go at $20,000. Any offer we make now will hold good. The boy needs a good rest and he is going to get it."

Langford has been getting the decision over those, but Stanley has consistently edged the negro. Ketchel, however, has gone on record as being willing to have his man, Langford, fight Ketchel only for real kind of terms and for any side bet, but Ketchel God has shown no great desire to take any chances with the Boston lightweight.

With Ketchel in retirement, the prospects for any big battles in the near future are very poor indeed.

BIG BLOW TO PIRATES IF CLARKE QUITS THE TEAM

Our friend Fred Clarke, the former from Winfield, Kan., is now the biggest figure in the world of baseball. He has won six fourth pennant in the National League, and will now quit baseball, according to declarations he made at the start of the season and repeated since then.

If he keeps his promises and quits baseball this Winter it will mean almost certain victory for the Cubs next year. As things stand, Chance & Co. row and decide off first and they go back and beat out the Pirates even in their full strength, but if Clarke is out of it the race ought to be a walkover for the Chicago team, unless something amazing and surprising and entirely unexpected is done in the way of strengthening the New York or Cincinnati clubs.

Clark is the driving force behind the Pirates. Wagner may be "the Pittsburg team," the way the scouts in the league call it, but the pounds in the team that shouts the bases and who is the keystone of the infield that is the real dynamo behind. Wagner, great as he is, is a trailer. Clarke is a leader, and one of the greatest in baseball.

He is not so heady as Chance, and moreover he plays the outfield instead of the infield, and he therefore just so much farther removed from the centre of the battle. He performs not so much in fielding chance, hard fighter though he is. But he knows how to wait, he is a judge of ball players hardly to be excelled, an expert field general, knows a pitcher at sight and for gameness cannot be beaten, and that's why I want to quit.

He wants to, go back to the farm. He has had a bellyful of ball. He would rather listen to the sound of the wheat breaking through the soil than to the rattle of three-base hits, and he would rather hear the sad and endless chant the theory of taking three strikes and the underlying strategy of the delayed double steal.

Eager to Return to Farm.

The phenomenon is a familiar one—the fighting man who fights though wearied of fighting, and yet through it all bears the song of the wheat. A Dinadottic, called from the plow, he would fain return to the plow.

And if he returns—good-bye, Pittsburg pennant. Manager Jim Clarke may not be found along the street.

Clarke is one of the richest players in baseball. He is said to be worth more than $150,000. Manager of the Pittsburg team for nine seasons, he has saved his money and invested it carefully. His first investments were in Kansas farm lands—for he was a Kansas farmer when he broke into the game.

When he won the first pennant for Pittsburg, in 1901, he bought the Mascot Hotel with what he had saved. He extended his holdings in the hotel and when he won in 1902, when he won his third pennant, in 1903, he built the Clarke block. Part of this, he said, was borrowed, but if so the indebtedness has been paid off long ago.

He kept on investing in the rich farm land around Winfield till last year it was estimated that his holdings amounted to $75,000. He bought a farm in Idaho, where he has a herd of hundreds of cattle, and has invested in Texas oil wells. All his investments have turned out well, and he long since reached the stage where he could retire if he wanted to.

He says he has wanted to—that he has tired of the game year after year only on the principle of "only one more," and that this is the last call on the Kansas rube—that's what they call them in Kansas.

The strangest thing about Clarke this year is the way he batting his cross up. He has been for several years a sticker about .270, but this year, spurred on by the tremendous spurt his team had taken, with its addition of new blood, has been hitting above the coveted mark of .300 and has played the most brilliant individual baseball of his whole long career—a remarkable thing when one considers that his managerial cares have been heavy, and the work of breaking in the new men who have brought the team to its present strength has been terrific. Only those who have coached a ball team have come to Labile, and yet here is Clarke leading his team, with a wholly reconstructed infield that needed reconstruction a second time in mid-season—batting, fielding and running among the ten brothers.

Is Good Outfielder.

Another thing must be said for Fred Clarke, that he is one of the greatest outfielders that ever drew on a glove, even more on his judgment of batters and knowledge of where to play them than on his wonderful mechanical ability. Fielder Jones of the White Sox and Jimmy Sheckard of the Cubs were his only competitors in this regard for years, and now that Jones is out of the game only Sheckard remains, and many hitter hours have been wasted in fighting out to Clarke in the hope of outfielder Clarke or Sheckard.

Perhaps Fred Clarke's Dreyfuss will have a fit. Baseball will lose one of its greatest, most picturesque figures. The fans every-where will lament him. Frank Chance will be sorry, for Chance's chance depends on a good fight, and he knows that with Clarke in the game he has a good fight next year, but it means

And after all—will Clarke quit? Fielder Jones is the only one in recent years who actually dropped the game for good while he was still right. Forget those Kling rumors—he will wear a Cincinnati suit next season! Will Clarke quit—or will the lure of the game be too strong after all?

BIG COLLEGE GAMES ARE CARDED TO-DAY

JEFFRIES BEGINS TRAINING; SAYS HE WILL WIPE JOHNSON OFF MAP

"Get Johnson Here," He Says, "Herd Him in the Same Room With Me and Let's Get the Names Down and the Money Posted."

James J. Jeffries as He Looks To-day

From snapshots made in New York yesterday on his arrival from Europe.

Jeffs smiling face, as he greeted his admirers.

Former champion in his ordinary attire.

By C. E. Van Loan.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—"Jack Johnson? If I don't whale that coon within an inch of his life, I'll have myself on my mind and never show my face again as long as I live."

A large, brown man, prominent cheekbones and one on the ear, made this remark yesterday morning from the deck of the Lusitania, as the big Cunard liner nosed into the North River. Not since Doc Cook shinned down the Oskar's ladder have so many literary gentlemen been stowed on the bay. They came out to see James Jackson Jeffries, known in some circles as "the hope of the white race."

"You've got to show me, Jim Johnson means business," remarked Manna da Jeff, flatfully cuffing his henchman, Berger, "and you must show me. I'm sick of this talk. I'm tired of discussing the question. I said when I went away that I would sign articles when I got back to New York. Now I'm here and ready to sign any time. You ought to be good enough, ain't it? Get Johnson here, and let's get the names down and the money posted. I'm not fooling, and I'm not four-flushing, and I'm not making newspaper talk. It's up to this big black fellow now, because I'm ready."

In justice to Jeff it must be said that he looks the part. He was not in Europe altogether for amusement. He left a few rounds on the other side, and when he walked down the gangplank yesterday there were creases in his cheeks—the fighting creases which all his followers remember—and his eyes-them-bones looked as if ready to bust through the skin.

Road Work Reduced Him.

"I did some road work in Germany," said Jeff, "and I got down to 229 pounds. Don't believe that, hey? Well, I did, and what's more, I don't weigh more than 230 at the present time, even after this steamer trip."

Jeff was nearly mobbed by his enthusiastic friends at the pier. He bore the gentleman with great patience.

"I'm glad to hear anybody talking United States," he said. "Over there in Germany I couldn't understand a thing. My wife had to order all my meals and I used to take her word for what I was going to eat. The only good thing about Germany is my mother-in-law, and she is all right."

"And she thinks you are all right," said Mrs. Jeffries.

"Fine'll help some," said Mr. Jeffries. "Now, speaking of Germany, that Carlsbad is an awful snare to get into. They don't do a thing to a tourist over there—an American tourist. They let up a little on their own people, but if you're from this country they don't do a thing but take your right eye out of your head. They think we're all millionaires in this country, and when I visited how much they wanted to perform a small operation on my nose—only one of the bones in that I can breathe easier—they named a figure that gave me a chill. Plenty of good doctors in this country would cut off your bones one for one's less wanted from me. See that nose thing now? serious. It's the nose of trouble I've had for ten years. Ever since my nose sank-bed in my first fight, and the bone is sort of crushed into the cavity. I'll save it, I attended mind you, before I right Johnson."

Denies $150,000 Story.

"What's this stuff about you saying you wouldn't fight Johnson unless they guaranteed you a purse of $150,000?" asked one of Jeff's bodyguard.

"Who's that?" said Jeff, spluding around. It was explained that a press agent from Paris had carried the news.

"Say, talked to a newspaper man over there. I was in Paris," said Jeff. "That must have been one of those correspondent fellows trying to sell something. Think I'm crazy, talking about such a purse as that? Say—"

"Well, how about McIntosh? Didn't he make you sore?"

"His bill, now?" snorted Jeff. "He knew when I was going to leave Paris. Came around and said he would like to get his gave out a talk to the effect that he was going across the channel and back and me on offer. He never saw me. That was just a little press agent stunt, Horace. I didn't talk to a reporter while I was over there, yes, I did, when I got off on a London pier. He gave me an Afrofilm."

"How do you figure Johnson since this Ketchel fight? was asked.

"Same as usual," said Jeffries. "He should have whipped Ketchel. I'll say all to go back to the files good! But that I said he is a big coon, since I've been over here. Ketch was never a world beater, for the most of that fight was framed up. Twice yes, I know what I'm saying—he licked Ketch. Ketch is a fair, fighting good middleweight, but he couldn't stand on a map as much heavier as Johnson is. It took a frame-up to do it. That's why Johnson is—"

"The middleweight champion," interjected the crafty Berger. "Show me where he ever licked any good middleweight."

"A lot of people believe you went over to pull a stall-in-the-ring stunt," said Jeff. "I'm supposed many dumb bill of selling of a series."

Signing Will Be Easy.

"No, I look like I was trying to get away from signing articles?" growled Jeff. "What would I be training for, hard, a foot race? No, sir! You get Johnson over here to New York, and I'll give you my word I'll sign the easiest kind of articles with you every time. It took me a long time to get ready to fight Jim Corbett, now, and you can get Johnson for me as easy as you please. If Jim wants a say in the proceedings it will come from him and not from me."

While the big fellow was peeling off his clothes and making ready for a rub down an AMERICAN photographer, he continued the discussion.

"The trouble is," said Jeff, "that a lot of guys will get in the way of Johnson and letting the straight truth. You go back and take up anything I have to say since I left Los Angeles to come east and you will find that the place where I have tried to hook people I gave them a square setto. I never did that in my life. I don't say exactly, but what I mean is, I said to it. I have kept my word every time."

"How does Jack Johnson strike you, Berger, stage managing the picture.

Jeff stood up for inspection, but a short pair of trunks and his street shoes. In every particular he is the Jeff of six years ago. Not a trace of the fine overhanging rounds of paunch, nor any fat shoulders, as heavily muscled as ever in his life, slope away to narrow hips; there is not an ounce of fat on his big sturdy legs.

Almost Ready to Fight.

"I'm lighter by twenty pounds than I ever was when going into training," said Jeff, who has prophesied that his next fights can vouch for this. "I could get ready to fight in thirty days—and be good and ready."

Jeff was asked about the terms under which he preferred to fight.

"I wouldn't say a word about that until I know what is going to be said for this fight," said Jeff. "The business arrangements will take care of themselves. The idea will not begin to come in until we are signed up, and then that part of the deal can be arranged. It's all one to me, though, of course, I'd like to have that side, but so. You understand, I won't insist on it, because Johnson may not want the side bet when he really finds out I mean business.

"The main thing is that I'm ready to talk fight. I'm ready to sign up. Get Johnson here and I'll prove it."

"But, Jeff, they say—"

"What do I care what they say? Johnson is the champion now, and I'm the challenger. Bring on the coon!"

There you are.

Now, then, bring on your wolf.

JEFFRIES IS GOOD AS EVER, SAYS BERGER

By TAD.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—"Jeffries will be as good as he ever was in his life the day he steps into the ring with Jack Johnson."

So said Samuel Berger, the mouthpiece and sparring partner of the big boilermaker.

"I know a lot of people have thought all along that Jeff was bluffing and had no intention of fighting, but that's moonshine," said Sam. "I'll admit that he took quite a while to convince himself, but when he started, a few months ago, that he would lick Johnson he meant it, and will keep his word.

"You know that Jim is no quitter. He's no Wilson Mizner with the ebb goods. He don't get a lot of money around him, and did them to death. He's too quiet, Jeff's the most quiet fighting man, but when he's going you now that, as sure as I'm here, he will fight, and will win.

"He told you at Hayden Springs, the time we were up there, that when he was too old to train he was too old to fight, didn't he? Well, when he found that he was still there with a bit of shyness on the wind he declared that he would make another try, and in a few months he will Show Stage Craft and Workout.

Jim never made any money out of the ring before in his life. He was always good, but never got the bowl and cheer over. When he quit the ring he went quietly into farming and never said a word.

"He realizes now that he is only big man who has a chance with Johnson. The public wants to see him fight, and now that he is all right he will start right off.

"Yes, he had an operation performed on his nose. It bothered him some, and he wanted it right. Now it's all right, and the public will see the greatest fight that ever took place.

"Suppose he jumped in the ring six months ago and was licked, why, the sports never would stop bothering. They'd say he went in for the race's end, knowing that he had no chance. They can't say that now. Believe me when I say that he's as good as ever. I know when a man's right, and Jim is.

* * *

Jeffries certainly looks great. Of course, he is heavy, but he seemed to be mighty close to his old self, and must have a lot of fight in him.

* * *

The big fellow is ready for business. It is strange that Johnson stays away when he should so soon and need that he was the willing party to sign.

* * *

From that Jeffries says, he has only to meet Johnson to agree on terms for the battle. And Johnson isn't here.

* * *

Managing Director Sam Berger was a busy young man when the Lusitania neared the dock. He tried to do everything, he everywhere and the cause of Jeffries the champion from the mob. He succeeded fairly well in everything but finally got Jeff and his wife safely stowed away in the albany.

* * *

"They're all robbers on the other side," said the ex-champion when talking about his trip. "Every time you open your eyes there's a hand striking for you to put some coin in. If you don't come through quick enough they are apt to help themselves."

* * *

He also said: "At Carlsbad they will take your eye if you give them a chance. That is the worst place ever."

* * *

According to Jeff there are no real fighters on the other side. This is especially true of England. He reports seeing some bouts at the National Sporting Club, and says the heavies that fought there would be pie for any of our welter or middleweights. The Britishers rely altogether on their left, and a man with a right could kill them.

GRIF TO LEAD REDS AGAIN

CINCINNATI, Oct. 23.—It is settled that Clark Griffith will lead the Reds next year. He submitted terms to President Hermann and a contract will be approved at the board meeting of November 1. The board will also vote Griffith a bonus for his good work this year in landing the team in fourth place.

Griffith in an interview said that he believed the Reds will play much better ball next year, owing to natural development and moral effect of the past season's success, and that if he can get two more good pitchers the Reds will land among the leaders.

GOLF GOSSIP NEWS OF THE LINKS

It was a treat to see Miss Dorothy Campbell, the British girl from South Berwick, Scotland, winner of the United States championship at Merion this year, play golf. Her game is played with the same assurance and steadiness that we see in an old veteran's golf. Every shot is played with precision, and nine times out of ten she is straight for the hole. Miss Teacher, the former Scottish champion, played with Miss Campbell at Oakley Thursday in the foursome tournament of the Women's Golf Association of Boston, and the Belgirl's score of 89 established a new record for that board of the course.

* * *

These players from across the pond are by all means exponents of the strenuous life, for when they went out to Oakley they had slept just five hours out of the last forty-eight. The girls, however, showed no signs of loss of sleep, and with this preparation considered, and the fact that it was a new course, their score of 89 was extremely good.

* * *

The Country Club golf team was victorious in their second match in the Atlanta golf team at Brae Burn, by 6 to 3, the Vesper golf team of Lowell by the same margin. These associations have been entered a great deal this Summer and have done a great deal to bind the various clubs of Massachusetts together. Little, however, has been known of the standing of the clubs throughout the season, as the results were published were the winners announced.

* * *

In the recent team match at the Brae Burn Country Club considerable disgust was felt at the slow scoring of the first holes. It is, indeed, a poor test of golf when it is an absolute impossibility to hit an approach dead. When players like Lockwood, Whittemore, Stevenson, Travis and many others play anywhere from 6 to 9 on a hole there is something wrong. Such holes as the fourth at Brae Burn, and it was severely criticised in the team matches.

* * *

The United States woman golf champion is in Boston to-day, and will in all probability play the Country Club course. She has her smartest along with her, namely, Miss Travers, Miss Temple and Miss Sprague, also their chaperons, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Gray.

* * *

A new women's record has been established for the Hamilton course of James R. Keene's stable, has been taken out of training and sent to the Egerton stud at Newmarket, all efforts to bring him back to racing form having failed. Harry F. Newcastle II. ran second in the great Sapling plate of 1,000 sovereigns here to-day. Sun Angel was the winner, with Dunraven third.

GIVES COULON A HARD BOUT

PITTSBURG, Oct. 23.—Johnny Coulon of Chicago, the champion little fighter of the country, met Young Zeiger of Pittsburg before the National Athletic club for six rounds and though the champion was returned a winner Zeiger, who was lighter, made things very warm.

Zeiger never hoped to better advantage and in each round he managed to land a blow or two which would have been disastrous to any one in poorer condition than Coulon.

FOOTBALL GRIDIRON NOTES

The shrinking of football by the faculty of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy leaves a big hole in the schedules of the home teams. The students are even forbidden to use the recently built gridiron on the campus.

* * *

The high quality of the Yale coaching staff may be seen in the influence of this second team. Two men trained under a number of second coaches have been picked for the All-American honors in college circles in the East.

* * *

Gray, Amherst college football star, is now at Lafayette college, where he will coach the team. Amherst is the second college to apply this season to a graduate of Lafayette for a football coach, Princeton considered the best man in the line. The Williams team is coached by Bob Peck, a Lafayette graduate.

* * *

Coach Hinkey is down as Ben Hinkey, a teacher in the famous Yale Hinkeys, is one of the greatest coaches in the country. Hinkey has been a star in playing on the scrimmage eleven, and although intelligence and pushing the man with the ball through the line.

* * *

Bill Roper, who is coaching the University of Mississippi eleven, springs a surprise on the sporting world this year by having a team that can play football. For many years Roper has been the A. A. demic to coach football, and he is said to be the Pacific coast.

* * *

Now football has been successful in the South. Four colleges, Cumberland university, Millsaps College, Centenary, Presbyterian college and Mississippi college, all of which are in Mississippi, have formed a football league and will play a series this fall.

* * *

Coached Hinckley is about the only coach Harvard this year is in shape to go into the intercollegiate games with. Dibblee, the star halfback, is out for the season, Saturday he wrenched his knee so badly that he will be unable to play for the remainder of the season. Fairly while playing on the second team.

* * *

Harvard has not scored Yale's goal line for a number of years, and Yale has not got from Harvard in that time.

* * *

Yale will use about 15,000 seats for the game in the Stadium November 20, which is about 22,000 short of the Harvard mark.

* * *

Coach Sexton of Williams, who used to play football for the Lehigh, December has coached some splendid teams at Lafayette and Lehigh.

Jim McCoy, who has been at New Haven coaching the youths, was one of the guards in the 1904 team, when was the last to play football at Harvard.

As Johnson Fell in the 12th Round.

First photograph of the San Francisco battle, showing the alleged knockdown by Ketchel, which Johnson was accused of faking.

In his fight with Ketchel last Saturday Johnson was floored in the twelfth and last round as shown in the picture. He arose quickly and a few seconds later Ketchel was knocked out.

JENNINGS ASKS MORE MONEY

DETROIT, Oct. 23.—Hugh Jennings, manager of the Detroit Tigers, is coaching on a rich salary next year, if he can make the team a four-time flag winner. Should he fail to realize this he will have to be satisfied with something less.

Official figures now place the net earnings of the Detroit club for the present season at $100,000. To what extent Jennings participates in this is not given out, but it is known that with his percentage on the profits and the world's series money he figures he will get in the last three years for his labors in Detroit.

Here are the figures Jennings probably has received during the last three years, including salaries and percentages: 1907, Detroit 1st, $17,500; 1908, Detroit 1st, $17,500; 1909, Detroit 2d, $17,500.

It is understood that President Navin does not care to make Jennings a better offer than that under which he was engaged for 1910.

Jennings says he will positively not remain here next year for that amount.

Jennings draws a big percentage on the home attendance, but he must put up stock in the club. It does not seem that he will demand part of the stock and assume liability in addition to contributing big sum here next Spring.

Navin is too fine the best of scouts at present because Jennings disobeyed orders during the world's series in pitching Summers the second time in the seventh game. He pressed at the present time Navin would be less likely to make any proposition favorable to Jennings than he would if the matter came up in the early months of 1910.

Y. M. C. A. ATHLETES AT THE FOOD FAIR

A special class of students from the Y. M. C. A. "gym," under the direction of Professor Roberts, will give an exhibition at the Food Fair in Mechanics Hall next Thursday evening. The Y. M. C. A. and Food Fair Boards. There will be a grand wand drill, exhibitions on the parallel bars, high ebb swinging and in mat and pyramid work.

HARDING A. A. STRONG ON THE GRIDIRON

The Harding A. A. of Revere will play the strong Manchester Heights team to-day at Crescent Park Field, Revere, Mass.

Out of the games played the Hardings have won four and tied one. The game Saturday will be with the strongest team on the North Shore, and if they win will be a strong factor in deciding their claim to the championship of the State in the 125-pound class.

The Hardings have not been scored on this season. The team is composed of exhigh school stars who a few years ago were rated as the best on the school gridirons.

TECH FIELD DAY NOV. 5.

Technology's field day is scheduled for Friday, November 5, beginning at 2:10 p. m. The order of events will be as follows: Tug-of-war, first trial, 2:10 p. m.; football, first half, 2:30; relay race, 3:05; tug-of-war, second trial, 3:15; football, second half, 3:25; tug-of-war, third trial, if necessary, 4:10. A flying start has been substituted for the standing start in the relay races. Each class will be represented by twelve runners.

JEFFRIES TO BOX O'BRIEN

The Curry Circle and Athletic Club of Lawrence arranged an important match for the next week, which will be held at the club Thursday evening, October 28. Albert Dufresne, champion of the bantam championship, and Freddie O'Brien of Chelsea were scheduled yesterday by Matchmaker Cullen to spar four rounds for a decision on the above date. Dufresne will be seen in the ring at the weight 122 pounds at 3 o'clock the day of the exercises.

BOXING BITS OF NEWS

Willie Fitzgerald is about to box again. He is announcing the ring he is matched to meet Jimmy Dunn, the Boston boy, at the Duquesne A. C. Pittsburg, on October 29.

* * *

Jimmy Dunn and Dusty Weber are to meet shortly in San Francisco in a long bout. Dunn will leave Boston for the Coast in a few days and Weber is expected to go to Los Angeles, where he defeated Dunn.

* * *

The Westerners who, before the Johnson-Ketchel fight, declared that Ketch weighed 160 pounds are now willing to admit that he scaled around the 150 mark. Fighting 160 pounds, Johnson easily outweighed Ketch by 20 pounds.

* * *

Frank O'Brien of the New Philadelphia Club is matched to box Joe Gans, the colored champion, on next Monday night.

* * *

A new boxing comedy from Al Reboski, the Mystic Square boxing instructor, will be given him Al and his troupe are rehearsing.

* * *

Young Brue, who put his Johnny Willetts out that after he puts the finishing touches to Jimmy Dygert at Pittsburg, Pa., on Monday night.

* * *

Harry Thomas, who won a championship at the Olympic games in England last year, arrived at Philadelphia.

* * *

Leach Cross has been training for his go with Harry Ferguson at Mechanics' Hall, Nov. 2. Since he got married Cross thinks that he should have a manager to look after his affairs.

* * *

First a very spectacular affair Packey has made of fight Ketchel, winner take all and bet accordingly. If Packey can't get a match he says he'll take a lot of confidence to Europe. Packey's manager says he will be in the ring in this country as well as Ketchel. It's going to be a fight, no matter where it is, without letting the public know.

* * *

Packey goes at Allaire and Nealson both in New York State, but Little the New York Athletic Club will not stand for any more fights in that state. Packey's manager says he will not be further Terry and Ed. Force is no doubt that Packey is a good one. Packey is sick of Terry and if he expects to ever be as great a man as Terry he must conclusively beat Ketchel. Ketchel is still a fighter.

* * *

Billy Gibson of the Fairmont Club is still confident that he will bring boxing back to Newburyport. He will start operations very soon.

BOSTON AMERICANS DOUBLE

Girls--Don't Talk Through Your Nose

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

THE other day while taking a Turkish bath I lay waiting my turn to be rubbed.

Near me in the great marble plunge two slim young things swam gracefully about.

Their black satin bathing suits glistened in the amber sunlight that filtered through the stained glass dome over the plunge. They were young and pretty and they chattered unceasingly.

But oh, if you could have heard the difference in those two voices! One was clear, soft, exquisite, the other harsh, nasal, loud. When they laughed, which was very often, the contrast was just as great.

One laugh was a soft, melodious peal, the other harsh, unmirthful. The girl with the harsh voice was as pretty as a picture, but her laugh and voice quite marred her charm.

Cultivate a Soft Voice

No matter how long you lived in the same house with that voice, its discord at note could not fail to strike you.

There is no excuse for a voice of that kind, for a soft voice can be cultivated.

The world over the American woman is criticised for her unmusical voice. "I cannot understand it," a foreigner once said to me. "The American woman is the prettiest, most charming woman in the world, and she has the worst voice in the world. How is it?"

The beginning of the trouble is that children are allowed to talk too loud. When a mother hears her child talking in a high-pitched nasal voice she should say, "Keep your voice down. Do not speak from your nose and the top of your head."

Two young friends of mine have exquisitely modulated voices and they owe them entirely to their mother's care.

In speaking of one of these girls a man once said to me: "Do you know that if I heard the girl speak and never had even seen or heard of her I would want to meet her; any man would want to know the owner of that voice."

Beauty Marred by Voice

Just pay some attention to your voice and laugh, and see how they strike you. You may be surprised to find how loud and unmodulated they both are.

To begin with, speak lower; then bring your voice from your chest, instead of your head. Don't burst into loud guffaws of laughter every time something amuses you; make your laugh as soft as your voice.

You may think all this rather unnecessary, but nothing is unnecessary that adds to a girl's charm.

Anything as dainty and sweet as the average American girl has no right to mar her charm by a harsh, unmusical voice.

I would rather have a musical voice in speaking than in singing. The one is for everyday use, and the other merely an accomplishment. The everyday qualities are the ones so beautiful and attractive for the everyday people are the ones we love most and meet oftenest.

Cultivate a soft, low, musical, honey girl, and add one more to the list of the charms of the American girl.

"A Dash to the Pole"

How the Church Aisle Looks to the Lover

By Nell Brinkley

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

A stiff hike up an endless path to the Minister behind the good driver, Love, who handles his pink "huskies" ably.

A LOVER fingered the graying hair above his temples and looked solemn. His dog's day IS almost done, and his time is almost come.

I reckon he'd been thinking about it.

And, says he, it's a dash to the pole—that's what it is—you know. I'm standing on first one foot and then the other for the day to come—and yet the nearer it comes over the weeks, like an Arctic lure over the snow fields, the colder I get up my back.

"At first it was only a breath that shuddered up and lifted my hair coldly up in the back. But now the goose-flesh is coming up like a coat of mail, my hands and feet go to sleep and the chill that struck into my heart and tummy.

"Two ways—oh, Lady, it is like a DASH TO THE POLE. The freezing silence, the cold currents I'll wade through on the way up, the bergs and the frost whiskers, the open icy water where I'll flounder around hunting for the answer and the ring. All this comes under the cold and suffering.

"And the other way it's like is that it too is a DASH! A painful, maddening struggle, sometimes years long, crawling little mean inches over blinding eternities of ice, the meadows of a Titan Snow King—folks call it a 'dash,'" A stiff hike up an endless path with a rustling bundle on your arm, whose name you can't remember, your legs detached from your self and floating around through the planets somewhere, while you walk on the stumps the same as you "slow drag" through a dream, running furiously and yet never going any farther, a million-year march, with your whole life having time to reel out before you like a flittering, moving picture—that's the same kind of a dash!

"Oh, Lady, our sledge is already packed and we're on our way.

"We have Contentment and Courage and Patience in our pack and Welded Hearts full of red blood—for after the pole we're on to Paradise! And mated folks need gobs of those things there. And we'll draw heavy on the courage sledging up the aisle.

"We have a good line of little pink huskies and a fine fat driver who enthused us into making the DASH, and swears he'll get us safe over the wilderness country that lies between the doors and the gentle-faced, cold-voiced man I'm calling the pole.

"I dreamed secretly of sledgetopping the dash and the gentle-faced, cold-voiced pole, but the little pussy woman whom I love entirely wants to play at being a really, truly, 'growed' woman once and have a satin train that she can listen to a-comin' behind her—and so we're off, my Lady.

"And the fine fat driver swirls his arm and cries, 'Mush ON, mush ON!'"

Polydore, the Palmist, Good Side-Stepper

By IRVING R. BACON.

IN his youth Professor Polydore had accompanied a mighty Nimrod on a tiger hunting expedition through India. Of hair-breadth escapes from the numberless deadly perils of the jungle he could talk most interestingly by the hour. Unflinchingly he had gazed into nearly all of the myriad faces which Death assumes; not quailing before howling, roaring, trumpeting beasts; standing undaunted amid hurtling shells on battlefields; watching without trepidation the breaking up of ice floes on which he had become marooned during polar trips—nothing, in a word, seemed able to shake his fortitude or wring from him a single sign of terror until he met his Waterloo at the hands of an elderly, but not unhandsome, woman.

Never was there a milder, kindlier, more sympathetic person than Mrs. Allston, Professor Polydore's landlady. Even his failure to pay rent for his "parlors" for three consecutive months was insufficient to corrugate the unruffled surface of this rather well-to-do widow's temper. Never once had she as much as hinted at his arrears. On the contrary, the larger his debt the sweeter seemed to grow her disposition.

The day the second month's rent became due Professor Polydore requested permission to read Mrs. Allston's hands.

"I shan't accept any pay," he said with his most gracious and engaging smile. And she, good soul, deemed herself more than repaid for the rent by the wondrous information he elicited from her small, well-shaped hands.

Tells of "Her Realm"

"The conic tips of the fingers," he told her, "are the sign manual of a nature unchanged with art. They indicate a love of all that is beautiful and poetic. There can be nothing gross or coarse in your nature. Nothing could be more foreign to you than the materialistic tendencies of the day. Idealism is the realm you dwell in, and refinement is in everything you do or think of, or desire."

During the next thirty days Mrs. Allston's visits to the professor for supplemental "readings" became more and more frequent. And by the time the fourth month was started on its trip around the zodiac, without any suggestion of payment for rent, the landlady's hands were, so to speak, in the keeping of the professor pretty nearly all the time.

The man who had looked with a calm eye and placid composure into death-dealing musketry and cannon now felt a sinking of the heart which almost caused his knees to knock together in a very anxious of terror. He was afraid of nature's fine sensibilities, and although attrition with the hardfisted fleets of life had worn them to a callous, he could not call to mind exactly the awfulness of the situation. He sympathized with his landlady, who had been so forbearing toward him, but yet the idea that she might exact a requital of the debt by expecting to lend her to the altar filled him with horror.

Palmistry Saved Him

It was at this point that the Professor rose to the full height of the occasion. He invoked the aid of palmistry. The next time Mrs. Allston submitted her hands to his inspection he started back with mingled surprise and alarm.

"A new line has formed in your right palm," he exclaimed. "It is still so faint that none but the practiced eye of a palmist can see it. I can trace it from the ball of the thumb, or Mount of Venus, as we call it, across the palm upward until it cuts a so-called line of affection near the edge of the hand just below the little finger. If you look closely you can see that, in its course, this new line also cuts the life line which is the line that circles around the ball of the thumb."

"What does it all mean?" questioned the widow, thoroughly frightened by the Professor's evident dismay.

"It is a most sinister omen," he replied, gravely. "Fortunately, however, it is merely a threat which can easily be made to avert. It signifies that if you ever marry again you will run headlong into the most frightful calamities. Not only will you cause misfortune and death to your husband, but your own life will pay the penalty."

"You say I can avert this?" gasped the widow. "How?"

"By not marrying," he replied, turning away his head and burying his face in his handkerchief in an apparent effort to conceal his emotion.

"We have a good line of little pink huskies and a fine fat driver who enthused us into making the DASH, and swears he'll get us safe over the wilderness country that lies between the doors and the gentle-faced, cold-voiced man I'm calling the pole.

"I dreamed secretly of sledgetopping the dash and the gentle-faced, cold-voiced pole, but the little pussy woman whom I love entirely wants to play at being a really, truly, 'growed' woman once and have a satin train that she can listen to a-comin' behind her—and so we're off, my Lady.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

CALL BY ALL MEANS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About three months ago there was a really studying man in a certain resort where I was living. Every day I would see her and she would bid me the time of the day, which I would return. Now we became such good friends that we have sent each other postal after postal. She is a very nice girl and comes from very good parents, I hear. Her actions make me believe she cares for me. Now she writes and tells me her parents will not object to my calling on her a call at her residence. The only thing I see very much against is she lives out of town. Do you think I will be would make us not care for each other? Do I'll proved right? Do you think I can call? I am nineteen years of age and she young lady is two years my junior.

S. W.

IF you really like her you will not consider it a trouble to go out of town to call on her and you will, perhaps, be better friends if you do not meet too often. Go and call on her, and if you enjoy the evening and she seems friendly, you can call again as soon as you care to.

SMALL, BUT ENCOURAGING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man of twenty-seven and would like very much to marry a girl friend of mine whom I have been keeping company with for the past three years, but am afraid to start in, as I am only making a salary of $12 per week steady work. I have $200 saved in the bank and am free from debts. Now I want your advice. Do you think I will be able to get along on that? She does all her making of her dresses and is a girl that can save.

J. J. C.

YOUR salary is small, but the fact that you save money and are free from debt is very creditable. If the girl is willing to live on such a small sum I think you could manage. If you have prospects of a larger salary I would advise you to wait a year before marrying.

Through the Wall

CHAPTER VIII.

Through the Wall.

COQUENIL'S examination of the pistol showed that it was a weapon of good make and that only a single shot had been fired from it; also, that this shot had been fired within a few hours, which, with the evidence of the seamstress and the dog, gave a strong probability that the instrument of the crime had been found.

If the ball in the body corresponded with balls still in the pistol, this probability would become a practical certainty.

And yet—the detective knit his brows—suppose it was established beyond a doubt that this pistol killed the billiard player, there still remained the question how the shooting was accomplished.

The murderer was in Number Seven. He could not and did not go into the corridor for the corridor was locked. But the billiard player was in Number Six. He was shot in Number Six and he died in Number Six.

How were these two facts to be reconciled? The seamstress's testimony alone must be put aside, but not the dog's testimony. The murderer certainly remained in Number Seven.

Holding this conviction, the detective entered the room of the tragedy and turned up the lights, all of them, so that no slight sue whatever was to be seen.

He walked back and forth examining the carpet, examining the walls, examining the furniture, but paying little heed to the body.

He went to the open window and looked out. He went to the ceiling sofa and sat down. Finally he shut off the lights and withdrew softly, closing the door behind him. It was just as the commissary had said—such the corpse of one thing.

While he returned to Number Seven, M. Paul found that sixty had kept his promise and sent him a pot of fragrant Turkish coffee, steaming hot, and a box of the choicest Egyptian cigarettes.

Coquenil Dreams a Bit

Ah, that was kind. This was something like it. And, putting on cushions in the soft corner, Coquenil settled back comfortable to think and dream.

This was his time, he loved best, these precious silent hours when the city slept and his mind became most active. This was the time when chiefly he received those flashes of inspiration or intuition that had so often and so wonderfully guided him.

For half an hour or so the detective smoked continuously and sipped the powdered delight of Stamboul, his gaze moving about the room in friendly scrutiny as if he would, by patience and good nature, to persuaded the walls or the chairs to give up their secret.

Presently he took off his glasses and, leaning further back against the cushions, he closed his eyes in pleasant meditation. Or was it a brief snatch of sleep?

Whichever it was, a discreet knock at the corridor door shortly ended it and Papa Tignol entered to say that he had finished the footprint models.

M. Paul roused himself with an effort and, sitting up, his elbow resting against the sofa back, he motioned his associate to a chair.

"By the way," he asked, "what do you think of that?" He pointed to a Japanese print in a black frame that hung near the massive sideboard.

"Why," stammered Tignol, "I don't think anything of it."

"A rather interesting picture," smiled the other. "I've been studying it."

"A purple sea, a blue moon and a red fish. It looks crazy to me," muttered the old agent.

Coquenil laughed at this candid judgment. "All the same, it has a bearing on our investigations."

"Diable!"

M. Paul reached for his glasses, rubbed them deliberately and put them on. "Papa Tignol," he said seriously, "I have come to a conclusion about this crime, but I haven't verified it. I am now going to give myself an intellectual treat."

"What?"

"I am going to prove practically whether my mind has grown rusty in the last two years."

"I wish you'd say things so a plain man can understand 'em," grumbled the other.

"You understand that we are in private room Number Seven, don't you? On the other side of that wall is private room Number Six, where a man has just been shot. We know that, don't we?"

"But the man who shot him was in this room. The little bair brushing and cuid saw the pistol thrown from this window. The dog found footprints coming from this room.

"The murderer went out through that door into the alleyway, and then into the street. He couldn't have gone into the corridor because the door was locked on the outside."

"He might have gone into the corridor and locked the door after him," objected Tignol.

Coquenil shook his head. "He could have locked the door after him on the outside, not on the inside; but when we came in here it was locked on the inside."

"No, not that door to the corridor has not been used this evening. The murderer bolted it on the inside when he entered from the alleyway, and it wasn't unbolted until I unbolted it myself."

"Then how, in heaven's name——"

"Exactly! How could a man in this room kill a man in the next room? That is the problem I have been working at for an hour, and I believe I have it solved."

"Listen! Between these rooms is a solid partition with no door in it—no passageway of any kind. Yet the man in there is dead; we're sure of that. The pistol was here, the bullet went there—somehow. How did it go there? Think!"

"Through the Wall"

The detective paused and looked fixedly at the wall near the heavy sideboard. Tignol, half fascinated, stared at the same spot, and then, as a new idea took form in his mind, he blurted out: "You mean it went through the wall?"

"Precisely! Now, how?"

The old man laid a perplexed forefinger along his illuminated nose. "But there is no hole—through the wall," he muttered. "There is either a hole or a miracle. And between the two I conclude that there is a hole which we haven't found yet."

"You might say a hole of that sideboard," ventured the other dubiously.

But M. Paul disagreed. "No man as clever as this fellow would have moved a heavy piece covered with plates and glasses. Besides, if the sideboard had been moved there would be marks on the floor, and there are none. Now you understand why I'm interested in that Japanese print."

Tignol sprang to his feet, then checked himself with a half ashamed smile.

Coquenil shook his head solemnly. "On my honor I have not been near the picture; I know nothing about the picture, but, unless there is some flaw in my reasoning——"

"I'll give my tongue to the cats to eat," burst out the other, "if I ever saw a man die on a sofa and blow blue circles in the air and spin pretty theories about what is back of a picture, when——"

"When what?"

"When all he had to do for proof was to reach over and—and hit the darn thing off its nail."

Coquenil smiled. "I've thought of that," he drawled, "but I like the suspense. Half the charm of life is in suspense, Papa Tignol. However, you have a practical mind, so go ahead—hit it off."

The Wonder of Wonders---The Promoter

By KENNETT HARRIS

HIS hair is short; he wear a trim cravat,
High collar, and a coat that's quite au fait;
His trousers are creased newly every day;
He wears an unromantic derby hat;
His figure is inclining to be fat;
His manner is not sad, but rather gay—
"Just commonplace," I think I hear you say.
You're apt to change your mind though about that—
Wait till you hear him talk and you will think
Demosthenes was nothing but a skate;
He'd even put Bill Bryan on the blink
When he begins in earnest to orate.
A poet, he. There's no poetic kink
He is not on to. He is simply great.

SHOW him a stretch of barren wilderness,
And by the mighty magic of his mind
He'll show you that it's nothing of the kind,
But a terrestrial Paradise—no less—
That shortly you'll be longing to possess.
He sees so much to which the mind is blind—
Beauty in bubbling bogs and swamps he'll find;
He'd boom town lots in Brimstone Lake, I guess
His prescient eye views velvet swards and glows
On mansions fair and busy marts of trade,
Where now the bullfrog croaks and rag weed blows,
Or rock-ribbed wastes defy the hoe or spade.
His eloquence in honeyed accent flows—
Poet! He's put the poets in the shade.

To-Day's Best Story

A STORY comes from a Kentucky town that is worth repeating. There lives a woman who says that she has immediate communion with the Almighty, and now and then delivers to those of common clay a message that she has received from on high. The fact that these messages sometimes take on a very materialistic line does not alter their effectiveness in her opinion.

One day she went into the office of a well-known attorney and approached him solemnly as one about to reveal an awe-inspiring secret.

"The Lord sent me to you for $25," she announced.

The attorney looked up and smiled. "That must be a mistake," he replied, blandly, "because the Lord knows I have got it."

Celestial communication was thereupon broken off.

Count Balzani is now a resident of Boston, being secretary of "Italia Lea." Miss de Zaldo has been prominent in Boston society. Her married sister is Mrs. Philip Lydig.

Out of the City

By ETHEL CLIFFORD

I WOULD be in the woods,
Where the spears of rain,
Broken by the innumerable leaves,
Fall to the ground like silent tears for the slain.

I would be on the sea,
Where the wind blows keen,
With all its dreadful histories of men
Fallen and lost in the lifting waves between.

I would be on the moors,
Where the lone call is,
And hear through the silence of the second air
Only the song of my heart and the lark in its distant sky.

Here in the sleepless town,
In the crowded street,
The air is heavy with men's destinies,
And the song of my heart is lost in the sound of the passing feet.

Good Things to Eat.

An enterprising marketman in the Quincy market has secured boxes of selected apples from the fruit fair and is showing them in his stall in competition with selected fruit from Oregon and Washington. The New England fruit compares very favorably in appearance with the Oregon apples and is greatly superior in flavor and keeping quality, the experts say.

Imported green peas are in the markets to-day, but there is not likely to be any great demand for them at $1.50 per peck.

The supply of grapes is said to be the largest that the Boston markets have known. The domestic grapes are very fine and cheap, and the demand for imported grapes is not so brisk as the importers would wish. A cargo of 25,000 barrels of Malagas, brought in Tuesday, has not been all sold yet.

Imported muscat grapes are selling for $2 a pound.

Among the novelties are French chestnuts, pawpaws, uncured figs, alligator pears, Egyptian melons and pomegranates.

Escarole is beginning to share in popularity with chicory and Mince as a salad plant and the marketmen find it difficult to supply the demand.

Wild mushrooms, which were a drug in the market at twenty-five cents a pound last week, have almost disappeared, and the dealers now demand $1.25 per pound for the few they have.

The cured squash is the latest vegetable novelty. It is a small multicolored vegetable with more the appearance of a fancy gourd than of an edible squash.

Pattypan goods are appealing in the market in great quantities and at reasonable prices, as prices go now-a-days.

YOU MEN WHO WERE COUNTRY BOYS—NO 7

By HERBERT KAUFMAN

YOU men who were country boys and came to Boston to win your fortune remember how hard it was to stand the nights. Hall bedrooms aren't very cheerful in the lamp-glow.

You wanted company—amusement, anything to break the awful loneliness and monotony. YOU came through safe, YOU had the moral, mental and physical strength to survive. Perhaps you met the right girl in time, but think back and recall some of the boys who were your friends then—WHO GOT IN WRONG AND WHO NEVER CAME OUT RIGHT.

What would it have meant for you in those days to have had a reading room, a gymnasium, a swimming pool, night educational classes, lectures and talks by men who had traveled and who had achieved?

What would it have meant to the boys who didn't succeed, who might have been helped to help themselves—to keep clean minds and sound bodies?

Boys are still coming from the country, nights must still be passed, ambition is still STRONG in the big teens and little twenties.

Don't you think that you ought to help dig the "safe thoroughfare"? The Y. M. C. A. has outgrown its building just because it hasn't outgrown its usefulness. Those INSIDE its doors aren't one, two, three to the number waiting on the steps.

It needs money for American manhood, to keep cleanliness in youth, to broaden brains and backs.

It needs some of YOUR money—as much as you can afford to give.

It needs it badly—NOW.

This is the seventh article in the Y. M. C. A. series by Mr. Kaufman. The first article was published in the SUNDAY AMERICAN and one has appeared each day since. Copies of the AMERICAN containing the series may still be obtained at AMERICAN office.

MEN IN THE MAKING; SOME SAMPLES OF Y. M. C. A. WORK

CASE NO 6.—He was a sailor, mate on a coasting schooner. He came in to see about studying navigation, and during the conversation it developed that he was color blind, which made his obtaining a license as master impossible. The usual questions brought forth the fact that he was interested in art, and while at sea or in port his leisure hours were devoted to drawing, sketching and painting. He had received no instruction, but his work showed that he was a man of marked ability. He was advised to enter the courses in freehand drawing and clay modeling, which he did with great enthusiasm. He kept it up for three years, and to-day is an expert with an expert's earning capacity.

The proposed new and larger building will make more of this work possible. The project needs your help now.

The Young Men's Christian Association fund for its new home is nearing the $300,000 mark. The sum raised at noon to-day totalling about $282,000. Since noon yesterday the enthusiastic workers in the canvass raised about $16,000.

Great enthusiasm was manifested when the report was made to-day, and before an other week rolls around it is confidently believed that the whole of the half million wanted will be in hand.

Regarding some reports heard by members of the committees that there were complaints being given to some of those engaged in the work, General Secretary Robert McC. Weeks, of the Y. M. C. A., made the following statement to-day:

No Commissions Given.

"A unique feature of this remarkable campaign is the large number of busy men who are giving voluntarily of their time to the solicitation of funds. Not a single individual is receiving any commission or payment whatever for this service.

"Dr. Ward, who is directing the canvass, is an employed officer of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association with headquarters in New York. He receives no commission whatever on the subscriptions secured.

"With a few exceptions, most of the officers here at headquarters are members of the regular staff of the Boston Association. They receive no additional compensation.

"We have found in canvassing that the question has come up, and it is only right that friends who are giving funds should know the exact situation."

Plan Vigorous Campaign.

Colonel William A. Gaston, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, called a special meeting of that committee at headquarters to discuss ways and means so as to help promote the campaign more vigorously and secure the large subscriptions of $5,000 and $10,000 that are urgently needed at this time.

After the meeting Arthur S. Johnson, chairman of the Executive Committee, made the following statement:

"We were somewhat disappointed at the report, which was due to the absence of the large subscriptions that have been obtained every day since the campaign started, and Colonel Gaston called a special meeting of the Citizens' Committee to consider the emergency.

"The progress of the canvass was discussed and steps were taken to secure the large contributions of $5,000 and $10,000 that are urgently needed at this time. The teams of the Business Men's and Young Men's Committees had gone over a most encouraging hard work, but they were not supported by the usual large gifts. Colonel Gaston explained the need of obtaining these now, and he hoped that they will be forthcoming.

Those present included J. J. Arakelyan, Jacob F. Bates, W. O. Bitney, James A. Dunbar, Frank L. Dyer, Charles A. Horne, Clement S. Houghton, William E. TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

DECLINES IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A very good selling movement caused several important price recessions in the last hour of trading in Wall street to-day. Losses were general. Union Pacific and several other big issues showing declines of over two points. Great Northern preferred and Northern Pacific each scored a three-point loss, while Steel common lost one point.

No reason of importance was put forward to explain the decline which followed an improvement showing over yesterday in the first hour of the session.

The bank statement was about as expected, showing a material gain in the surplus reserve.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, OCTOBER 23, 1909

CONGRESS MUST NOT DENY THE PEOPLE

On the question of the popular election of United States Senators the people of the several States have issued a mandate to Congress which should be obeyed at this Winter's session.

The Legislatures of thirty-one States have passed resolutions requiring Congress to call a constitutional convention for the purpose of framing an amendment that shall provide for the ELECTION OF SENATORS BY THE PEOPLE.

Here is the roll of importunate States:

Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Jersey, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Washington, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

An amendment to the constitution requires the favoring vote of three-fourths of the State Legislatures.

But the constitution provides two ways of arriving at such a vote.

The short and easy way is for Congress itself to propose the amendment—by a two-thirds vote of both Houses—and submit it to the States.

Congress has refused to take this course in the matter of the election of Senators by the direct vote of the people.

So the country has had RECOURSE TO THE MORE DIFFICULT METHOD.

This latter was devised to meet the very case that has arisen—the case of a recalcitrant Congress that has grown apart from the people and become unresponsive to public opinion.

For such an emergency—threatening a breakdown of republican institutions—the constitution provides that two-thirds of the State Legislatures acting together can require Congress to summon a constitutional convention—which shall be qualified to frame the amendment that Congress ought itself to have framed.

The thirty-one States that have made their demand upon Congress for a convention constitute the necessary two-thirds of our forty-six States.

The enemies of popular government are saying that the States have merely made a request—which Congress may consider whenever it pleases or not at all.

But to say this is to cut the heart out of the constitutional provision under which the States have been acting.

The provision was meant to open a way through which the people could force an amendment in spite of Congress.

It was foreseen by the fathers of the constitution that the people might need an avenue of escape from the usurpations of a congressional oligarchy.

And the particular measure in question—the election of Senators by the direct vote of the people—is a measure that has been put forth to meet just such usurpations.

THE THIRTY-ONE STATES HAVE DEMANDED A CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

But, of course, they do not care for the convention; they want the amendment.

The obvious course for Congress to take this Winter is to make a virtue of necessity, and do now of its own motion what it should have done eighteen years ago. Congress should make the constitutional convention unnecessary by undertaking itself to frame and present to the Legislatures, without delay, the amendment that has been IMPERATIVELY DEMANDED.

Ocean Freights Cost More Than a Subsidy

The people of the United States pay out $300,000,000 every year for ocean freights and the money goes into the pockets of English, German and French vessel owners.

This $300,000,000 of American money goes into foreign banks to be used in the development of foreign industry and agriculture.

This $300,000,000 is taken out of American circulation every year. It might be profitably used here to build new factories and give employment to many thousand laborers. It might be used for the development of mines, the building of railroads, the construction of irrigation works.

But instead of using American money at home to develop American industry, the American people, under the senseless policy of the government, are compelled to take $300,000,000 out of their pockets every year and see it go to develop foreign industry.

Does it pay, Mr. Farmer? Does it pay, Mr. Laboring Man? Does it pay, Mr. Manufacturer?

Of course, it does not pay. It is a foolish system, one that should be abandoned, and that quickly.

Here's another thing to think about. Since 1835 GREAT BRITAIN has paid $300,000,000 for ship subsidies and built up a merchant marine that CONTROLS THE COMMERCE OF THE WORLD.

Ocean freights paid to foreign shipowners cost the people of the United States as much every year as it has cost England in seventy-four years to SUBSIDIZE her own ships.

Have you contributed to the Y. M. C. A. building fund?

Dogfish keep up the price of lobsters by eating the young ones. They should display a sacred dogfish in some prominent position on Boston Common.

A humorous paper suggests that the White House be put on rollers. Even then it would be hard work sledding it through the Sierras, especially with our present President aboard.

There are no Boston "Suffragettes." Make it "Suffragists," please. There's a difference.

"Mr. Taft rides a cayuse to see the cattle round-up," says the headline. Pity the poor cayuse—whatever that is.

It is generally conceded that the Boston American has a greater circulation than all the other Boston evening papers combined, and that it is as strong in Boston in the evening field as, for example, a paper of the combined strength of the Evening Journal and Evening World would be in New York city, or the Evening American and Evening News in Chicago.—Advertisers' Magazine.

America and the Ferrer Case

By CHARLES FERGUSON

EUROPE is thrown into convulsions over the unhappy fate of Professor Ferrer. America is calm.

Ferrer was an apostle of liberty. He was killed by the ministers of law.

America lacks no throb of sympathy for the martyrs of liberty. But America has also a sympathy for the authority of government.

The Old World is torn asunder by the immemorial conflict between these seemingly opposite principles. But America is at peace, because it has worked out a way of conciliation between the cause of freedom and that of authority.

To understand this way of conciliation is to understand "the genius of these States."

There are generous and well-meaning people among us who fly into fits of indignation at what they call our apostasy from the ideals of European radicals. But the truth is that Americans never had these ideals.

European radicalism differs from the American brand in being much more impatient and reckless.

Our typical champion of personal freedom and the rights of man was a sober and scholarly country gentleman devoted to education and agriculture—Thomas Jefferson by name.

It is impossible to imagine a man of Jefferson's character addressing a mob in Trafalgar Square in the manner of Albert Grayson or stirring the boulevards of Paris in the fashion of Jean Jaurès.

Europe from end to end has for many ages suffered from such an overemphasis of authority that its shout of liberty is overemphatic. It is strident and feverish.

It is the poignant pathos of a life like that of Francisco Ferrer that, in spite of its natural bent toward the orderly ways of education and constructive effort, it is thrown by the opposition that it encounters into an attitude of violent protest, and ends in the exaggerations of anarchism.

America is calm.

Europe is sick and a prey to disorders because everywhere in Europe the law rests upon a military basis—that is to say, upon an arbitrary and irrational basis.

In a certain sense Europe is always under martial law. And it is the irrationality of the arbitrary authority that breeds the corresponding irrationality of anarchistic revolt.

On the other hand, the law in America is not military, but industrial in its grand plan. It is very imperfect, very unjust in details, but it is not arbitrary or absolute.

It is felt to be accessible to reason and subject to improvement.

It is framed not to keep things fixed, but to keep things moving.

It is practical and businesslike—mobile and responsive to experience. It is intended to promote efficiency and to afford a career for talent.

It gets terribly clogged by monopolies.

But we do not think of abandoning its genius. We have no doubt that we can relieve its congestions and allay its inflammations.

Now, it is by the establishment and maintenance of industrial law, in the place of military codes of the Old World, that we have solved the problem of driving liberty and authority in double harness.

We are sorry for both the Anarchists and the Absolutists of the Old World. We understand that they are correlative, that the one begets and necessitates the other.

But we in America are neither Anarchists nor Absolutists.

And we are intolerant of both—on this soil.

For this land has a mission of redemption to the distracted countries of Europe.

For the sake of the world's salvation we will not abandon our historical ideal—our devotion to legal liberty, to free government.

MY MAIDEN NAME WAS JIMJAMS

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

A STERN and ugly husband was quarreling with his wife,
A doleful situation, to be sure;
The cruel words she said to him went through him like a knife.
Because he loved his wife, so good and pure.
At last he lost his temper, though, and rising from his chair,
"If I am such a monster," he inquired,
"Why did you ever marry me and wish my lot to share?"
Then this retort at him she promptly fired.

CHORUS.

"My maiden name was Jimjams—that's why I married you,
To-day I sit and shudder at the awful blank I drew.
I didn't like to tell you this, but from my heart it came;
My maiden name was Jimjams and I had to change my name."

II.

The stern and ugly husband, his cheeks now flaming red,
Unto his peevish wife then did exclaim:
"Why don't you get divorced from me? I'm sorry we were wed;
I think that Jimjams is a pretty name."
Then came the sad old story of a matrimonial wreck.
The couple were divorced the following year;
And every time the ex-wife gets her alimony check
She thinks of how she told her husband dear:

CHORUS.

"My maiden name was Jimjams, etc."

BANK ON ONE GOOD FEED AS THE G-WHATAMAUDS USUALLY DO THINGS UP BROWN IN THAT RESPECT
1
MR. AND MRS. JONES, LET ME INTRODUCE MR. PERCIVAL AND FERDINAND HALL HOOPH, THE JONES'S ARE STRANGERS TO OUR CITY AND ARE LOOKING FOR APARTMENTS. NOW IF YOU BOYS COULD— EXCUSE ME A MOMENT. SOMEONE IS CALLING ME.
OH- MR. G-WHATAMAUD
2
LOOKING FOR APARTMENTS ARE YOU? QUITE A PROBLEM INDEED. DEPENDS OF COURSE ON HOW MUCH ONE WANTS TO PAY. FOR $5.000 A YEAR, ONE CAN LIVE QUITE RESPECTABLY, THOUGH THERE'S LOTS OF APARTMENTS RENTING FOR SAY $100 A MONTH THAT ARE QUITE SATISFACTORY TO ONE OF MODEST TASTES.
3
THEN OF COURSE THERE'S THE QUESTION OF EATING. YOU MIGHT ENGAGE YOUR OWN COOK AND HAVE YOUR MEALS SERVED IN YOUR APARTMENTS OR YOU COULD DINE OUT. I SHOULD THINK FROM $20 TO $50 A WEEK WAS A FAIR AVERAGE. IF YOU PATRONIZE THE BEST RESTAURANTS
OH MY!
4
NOW IN OUR CASE, WE TOOK A 5 YEARS LEASE OF OUR APARTMENTS IN THE SWELLDOBB, CONSEQUENTLY WE GOT SOMEWHAT OF A REDUCTION. $4.500 A YEAR WASN'T IT FERDIE? FIRST ALONG WE ENGAGED A FIRST CLASS COOK AT $50 A MONTH, BUT I THINK THE RESTAURANT PLAN IS THE BETTER. MORE VARIETY Y'KNOW.
YES, REDUCED FROM $5.000.
5
WELL, DID THE BOYS THINK THEY COULD FIX YOU UP? THEY OUGHT TO KNOW THE GAME PRETTY WELL AS THEY'VE LIVED IN BOARDING HOUSES EVER SINCE COMING TO THE CITY. OF COURSE, YOU WILL WANT A MORE PRETENTIOUS ROOM THAN WHAT HALL-ROOM HAS. AH-? BY 10 AT $2 PER. I WOULD HARDLY DO WOULD IT? HOW ABOUT THAT ROOM ON THE 2ND FLOOR YOU WERE TALKING ABOUT THE OTHER DAY DOWN AT MRS. PRUTNS- THEY MIGHT GET THAT FOR $12 A WEEK AND BOARD.
MR. HALL-ROOM DIDN'T MENTION THAT.
